SHIP HEARS NOBILE

Reported in Direct Touch With Italia; Norwegian Flier Off on Search

Oslo, Norway, May 28 (AP). An unconfirmed rumor is being circulated here today that Gen. Umberto Nobile's representative in Vadsoe, Maj. Vatani, had received a report from the Italia's base ship Citta di Milano that the latter had caught an emergency signal on a wave length of 900 meters. This is the wavelength of the missing dirigible.

Lieut. Luetzow Holm, Norwegian flying ace, started at noon today from Horten with a Norwegian navy hydroplane for Tromsoe on the first leg of a trip to Spitzbergen to begin a search in the air for the missing dirigible Italia.

Second Steamer on Way

Lieut. Holm, who intends first to explore the north and northeast coasts of Spitzbergen, hoped to arrive at Tromsoe at midnight.

He will immediately board the Sealer Hobby, hired by the Italian Government for the Spitzbergen trip, which is ready to start as soon as the naval monoplane is loaded aboard her.

Lieut. Holm was accompanied by mechanic Myre.

GARBLED MESSAGES, in French and Italian, picked up by radio stations in San Francisco and elsewhere on the Pacific Coast, come undoubtedly from Nobile's dirigible Italia.

But the location of the airship was not given, and hope rests on search at random inside the Arctic Circle.

Fortunately, Gen. Nobile has provisions for a month, with sleds and as full equipment as could be carried. He and his companions are men of courage, and hope need not be abandoned for several weeks.

Can the human mind conceive anything more dramatic than those messages in two languages, coming out of the frozen North Pole region, asking for help?

Who would have dared predict such a wonder twenty-five years ago?

Among Democrats the presidential nomination is settled. It's all over for Governor Smith, except the campaign.

The question is, "who shall run for vice-President?" Some stalwart friend of the honest farmer is wanted, one that "could capitalize the Republican 'farmers'' hostility to the President's McNary-Haugen veto."

The hostility exists. But how are you going to make a farmer, born and bred Republican, vote Democratic?

The Ethiopian does not change his skin, or the leopard his spots, least of all in politics.

Change from one party to another requires independent thought, and that is painfully difficult.

H. G. Wells has a plan for management and government of this earth, with one board of directors running the whole thing.

Following Mme. Nolla, boy scientist of France, Christianity, which began with "the complete communism," has become the completest capitalism.

"Take all thou hast and give to the poor," has been changed to "get all thou canst, and devil take the slowpoke."

Buddhism began in complete renunciation. Buddha let the hungry tigress eat his body. Now vilest superstition replaces Buddha's teachings—and so it goes.

Mr. Wells' plan is interesting, like those of Plato, in his "Republic," Moore in his "Utopia," and Karl Marx, in his book that became the foundation of modern socialism.

Each one would work as well as the other, that is to say, not at all. Yet each is useful, for it makes men think, and that is important.

The human race is an individual on a bigger scale, and it is in its infancy. It is useless to contemplate a baby two years old and plan to make a man of it in six months.

You must observe how and at what rate your race or individual can grow, then do what you can to direct and promote good growth.

The most important work now is to encourage thought and distribute knowledge. And the greatest agency is the public school.

"Give light and the people will find their own way." Give good public schools and you give light.

Arthur Keith, heavyweight British scientist, denies the possibility of life after death.

29 RESCUED BY LYNN FIREMEN

Twenty-nine persons were carried down ladders by firemen today, and ten others escaped by leaping from first-floor windows, in a two-alarm fire in a three-story wooden apartment house on Vine st., Lynn.

Flames and smoke filled all corridors and stairways, trapping the occupants in their rooms, and for a time firemen feared a repetition of the Essex Castle fire of several years ago, in which five persons were burned to death.

Timely discovery of the fire by John Greenhalge, a tenant on the first floor, and heroic work by firemen combined to prevent a tragedy.

Three firemen were blown out of the front hallway by a hot air explosion and a 16-year-old girl collapsed after being rescued from the third floor, but otherwise there were no casualties.

The fire apparently started in a closet under the stairs on the first floor, where workmen had stored repair and painting materials, according to fire department officials. The lower hall was ablaze and smoke had already risen through the entire building when Greenhalge, in his suite opposite the closet, smelled smoke seeping into his bedroom.

Dawes Vote Kills Move to Adjourn

Washington, May 28 (AP)—The Senate today defeated the House resolution to adjourn Congress tomorrow at 3 p. m. (e. s. t.).

The vote was 46 to 40 and Vice President Dawes broke the tie by voting against the resolution.

Walsh of Massachusetts, Dale of Vermont and Hale of Maine were the only Republicans. All other New England Senators voted for it.

Previously the Senate had defeated two attempts by Senator Johnson of California to prolong the session for action on the Boulder Canyon dam bill. His attempts were to fix June 5 and then next Saturday as the adjournment date.

Asked what the next move would be, Senator Curtis of Kansas, Republican leader, smiled and replied, "We are in session."

"How long?"

"Indefinitely."

FLIER HURT IN BOSTON CRASH

Lieut. Julius Dexter, regular army airman, who broke the record for the Washington-Boston flight last week, was injured, and his record-breaking plane was completely wrecked today, when he crashed at the Boston airport while hopping off for Washington.

Bruised, cut and bleeding profusely, Dexter was removed from the wreckage by fellow fliers and rushed in an ambulance to the airport dispensary.

The wrecked plane is a Boeing one-seater pursuit model with the label PWBC. Dexter flew here from Bolling Field in two hours and 50 minutes.

As he took off he rose about 150 feet and then started his turn down wind. As he pulled up in a tight right hand planing curve, the plane slipped and crashed. Observers on the field thought that his engine sounded as if it was fading out.

The plane landed almost squarely on the east-west runway from which the flier had taken off.

DEER ISLAND 'MURDER' PRISONER IS GUARDED

Suspecting murder, prison authorities today placed a Deer Island inmate under special guard, pending further investigation of ten death of another prisoner, Emilio Gonzales, who was found 10 days ago in a corridor of the prison with a knife in his heart.

Gonzales was at first believed to be a suicide, due to despondency. He had asked for a parole, but had heard nothing. The order granting his request reached the prison officials within an hour after his death.

The action involving the man held was taken by Commissioner Philip A. Chapman of the Penal Institutions Department and Master George F. Mulcahy of the Deer Island House of Correction.

FORD IN FITCHBURG IS HOPEFUL FOR N. E. MILLS

Fitchburg, May 28 (AP)—Henry Ford on a visit here today saw no cause to worry over factories idle on account of conditions in the textile industry.

"New England cities may be sure their factories will not be idle long," he said. "Other industries will soon occupy them."

Mr. Ford came here to look for a model of the old brown steam engine which was manufactured in this city years ago and which he wanted to add to his collection.

PRESBYTERIANS ACT ON CHURCH UNION PLAN

Tulsa, Okla., May 28 (AP)—A proposal for unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church with the Presbyterian church in the U. S. A., was presented to the Presbyterian General Assembly here today.

The proposal was referred to the church department of co-operation and union, with instructions that it present a report before the next general assembly, thus deferring action on the plan for at least a year.

The merger was proposed in a memorial by the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Kansas City, which suggested that the two denominations were kindred in spirit and operated in the same territory.

At the same time, in adopting a report of the committee on co-operation and union, which was presented by its chairman, Dr. J. Ross Stevenson, president of the Princeton Theological Seminary, the general assembly refused overtures for participation in a conference in June with representatives of the Universalist and Congregationalist churches.

Arctic Wastes Hold Nobile's Fate — Locked With Fates of His Men — Behind Curtain of Ice

WORLD FEARS FOR POLAR VICTOR'S SAFETY

Gen. Umberto Nobile, shown at the door of the gondola of the dirigible Italia, is five days overdue at his base at Spitzbergen after his second flight to the North Pole. Faint calls for help have been picked up which are believed to have come from the Italia, which carries a crew of 15 and Gen. Nobile's pet dog, which also accompanied him on his trip with Amundsen to the Pole. Nobile was returning to his Arctic base, where he had dropped the cross given him by the Pope, when he ran into a terrific gale and all of a sudden his radio was silenced. Many believe he has been forced down on the ice.

NORWEGIAN AVIATORS OFF TO HUNT FOR NOBILE

The steamer Braganza, which also is at Tromsoe, started today for Spitzbergen. Her commander will get in touch with the Italia's baseship, Citta di Milano, and will assist in a search for the Italia.

Preparations are being rushed for a large scale auxiliary expedition to search for the missing dirigible. It is expected that the details will be concluded tonight.

No word as to the exact plans has been divulged, and the Italian legation refuses any information. It is believed, however, that Capt. Riiser-Larsen, second in command of the North Pole voyage of the Norge in 1926, will be leader.

Arctic explorers spent the week-end discussing all possible contingencies concerning the Italia. In view of meteorological reports, Capt. Riiser-Larsen said that the Italia probably had landed somewhere north of Spitsbergen and that it was not likely that the ship had been driven any further.

Lieut. Holm, therefore, was given orders to fly from Kings bay northward, searching along the ice-covered coast of north and eastern Spitzbergen. If this theory should prove correct, it is felt that there is good hope that the crew of the Italia can be rescued.

Roald Amundsen, the famous polar explorer, and Capt. Otto Sverdrup, widely experienced Arctic explorer, have been called into consultation and gave extensive advice, but probably will not participate in the rescue expedition itself.

Capt. George Wilkins and Lieut. Carl B. Eielson, who recently arrived in Norway after a flight across the top of the world from Alaska to Spitzbergen, also were asked to participate, but did not see their way clear and left here by airplane for Copenhagen, Denmark, where they arrive this afternoon.

Call for Aid for Nobile Reaches U.S. Ship in China

Washington, May 28 (AP)—The United States naval transport Chaumont, stationed near Tientsin, China, reported to the Navy Department today through Admiral Mark L. Bristol, that she had picked up the following message at 10:40 p. m. last night:

"Cp de Osros 3 Qte dirigible General Nobile is in distress, asking for help. He is supplied with a short wave 39.33 meter radio."

The message picked up by the Chaumont appeared definitely to settle any mystery connected with the similar message picked up in California, since it obviously did not come from the Italia, but was simply a message sent out to notify other stations of the plight of the dirigible.

Chaumont, being in Chinese waters, could pick the message up more clearly from Vladivostok, where it apparently originated, than could the stations on the Pacific coast, which had difficulty reading it.

Commercial and amateur radio operators on the Pacific coast maintained a constant vigil today, however, in hope of picking up more messages.

Stations of the Radio Corporation of America tuned their powerful instruments to wave lengths used by the station giving the call letters "ARRASA," which broadcast the SOS messages.

The station was identified by the American Radio League as being operated by a member of the University staff at Vladivostok, Siberia.

Ice Floes Block Relief Ship in Hunt for Italia

Kings Bay, Spitsbergen, May 28 (AP)—Ice, which might have caused the collapse of the dirigible Italia, today blocked the first attempt to search for the missing airship.

The Citta di Milano, base ship of Gen. Umberto Nobile's polar expedition, sailed from Kings Bay to make a preliminary survey of rescue conditions off Amsterdam Island, off the northern coast of Spitsbergen. A strong wind was piling ice floes against the coast, the message added, and the relief ship could go no farther.

The Italia was six and a half days out of Spitsbergen today, last definite word from her having been received at 9 a. m., Greenwich time, Friday (4 a. m. eastern standard time).

Wireless operators on the Citta di Milano stuck to their posts, either listening for the Italia or sending out messages of encouragement in the hope that even with her sending apparatus silent the Italia might be able to pick up messages.

Capt. Riiser-Larsen, the right-hand man of Amundsen and Ellsworth in the 1926 Polar expedition of the Norge and now directing the search for the Italia, has attained great distinction in Arctic exploration and aviation for resourcefulness and courage.

He is a graduate of the Norwegian naval school and is 38 years old. He entered the navy in 1912 and joined the Norwegian air force in 1915, and since then his experience has been extremely varied.

For a time he flew in the air mail service, was on patrol duty during the World War and then was director of the Norwegian naval seaplane factory. In 1922 he gained a reputation as a skilful seaplane pilot by flying the entire length of the Norwegian coast, one of the most dangerous coasts in the world, without accident.

Hunt for Nobile Recalls Loss of Andree in 1897

New York, May 28 (AP)—Search for the Italia recalls the fate of Salomon Augusto Andree, Swedish aeronaut, lost on an expedition into the Arctic 31 years ago.

Andree, in a balloon named the Eagle sailed into the north from Dane's Island, Spitzbergen, July 11, 1897. With him were Dr. S. T. Strindberg and Herr Fraenckell.

The balloon was a gas bag, 67 feet in diameter and standing 100 feet high. It was equipped with sails, and was capable of making 13 to 15 miles an hour with a favorable wind.

Thirty homing pigeons and many message buoys which could be dropped into the sea were carried. Two days after the departure one of the pigeons returned with a message dated a short time previously.

"Good passage east ten degrees south," the message said. "All well on board. This is the third pigeon post."

This was the last heard of the expedition.

CHURCH UNION IS PROPOSED

looking to a union of the three denominations.

Discussion of prohibition and divorce occupied the assembly today.

Resolutions asking national political conventions to adopt platforms pledging candidates for national offices to enforcement of the eighteenth amendment were prepared for submission to the assembly by Dr J. W. Claudy, head of the moral welfare department of the Presbyterian board of Christian Education.

The report of a special committee appointed by the general assembly of 1926 recommending that the Presbyterian church sanction divorce only on grounds of infidelity was ready for presentation. The report recommends a revision of the articles of faith to eliminate desertion as grounds for divorce.

After a brief flareup of the modernists-fundamentalists controversy the assembly refused to consider a case fro mthe New York synod involving the belief held by a minister relative to the virgin birth.

The case, brought by Walter D. Buchanan in a complaint against the licensing by the New York synod of Cameron Parker Hall and the receiving of the Rev. Carlos G. Fuller into membership, had been thrown out by last year's general assembly.

HELD IN DEATH OF PRISONER

Magrath, who performed an autopsy, has not made his official report, but he is to confer with prison authorities regarding the case.

The man held is serving three years and three months for larceny and carrying a revolver. He was sentenced in superior court in April, 1926. Court records give his home as Cleveland and his occupation as accountant.

Gonzales had completed about 40 months of a five-year sentence for breaking and entering and larceny. His parole was to take effect August 2. He was 26 years old and had served part of his sentence at Concord reformatory.

6000 N. Y. CHINESE PARADE IN PROTEST AGAINST JAPS

New York, May 28 (INS)—Chinatown forgot its tong wars today in a colorful procession to protest against the Japanese invasion of Shantung. Nearly 6000, under the banner of the Chinese Nationalist Patriotic Society, and led by Dr. G. C. Wu, Nationalist party envoy to the United States, were in the march. Dr. Wu's wife in Oriental costume, marched by his side.

Seventeen counts of forgery, uttering and larceny were charged against Herbert L. Kenney, alias Bert Kenney of Thetford ave., Dorchester, when he appeared in Suffolk court today. The charges involve transactions with his Tremont st. employer. He pleaded not guilty and was held in bonds of $10,000.

FORD IS GUEST OF 'HIS BOYS' estate by announcing that a swimming hole would be dug for them, Henry Ford was their guest today at an old-fashion chicken dinner.

With a party of eight, including Mrs. Ford, the manufacturer walked over to the school from the inn and found himself facing there a battery of kodaks in the hands of the boys who were lined up on the porch, their hair slicked back and their faces glistening.

Nerve failed every one of them, however, as their benefactor arrived, for not a camera clicked. Mr. Ford soon put them at ease by shaking hands with each one and pairing the appearance of the boys' quarters as he made a tour of inspection of the dormitory, accompanied by his guests.

The proudest pupils today are the five who helped cook the dinner in the big kitchen and the four who waited on table, especially the last. The waiters were "Mickey" Maguire, "Red" Comstock, "Davo" Sobel and Earl Stoddard.

A separate table would not do for the magnate and he insisted on sitting down with "my boys." The menu consisted of cream of asparagus soup, roast chicken, mashed potatoes, squash and turnips, deep custard pie and milk. Bachelor buttons and daisies from the estate adorned the tables.

This is Mr. Ford's second visit to his school since it was opened last March.

He leaves tomorrow. He strolled about his property hatless today and seemed in the best of health.

7000 SIGN PETITION TO AID BANKER IN JAIL

On the plea of 7000 petitioners, Frank A. Brooks, chairman of the State parole board, is arranging a hearing for commutation of sentence for Frederic C. Nichols, Fitchburg banker, now serving a sentence at Rutland prison camp.

Nichols was treasurer of the Fitchburg Savings Bank. He has served a year and a half of a three to five-year sentence for misdirection of the banking laws. After eight months at Charlestown he was transferred to Rutland. The hearing will be held at the camp June 5.

Charged with attack upon Miss Lillian Corcoran of Fountain ave., Somerville, four coast guardsmen attached to the barracks at the Wakefield rifle range were held for the grand jury in bail totaling $40,000 when arraigned in Woburn court today. The alleged attack occurred in Reading Wednesday after Miss Corcoran's escort, James F. Sullivan of Malden, had been driven from her side at the point of a gun. The men held are Manerd R. ALL ITALY JOINS IN MESSAGES OF HOPE

Rome, May 28 (AP)—A message which the Italia's base ship Citta di Milano was continually broadcasting from Spitzbergen today in the hope that the missing dirigible Italia would pick it up—"Italia, Italia, have faith; we are organizing relief"—might well be taken to be the message of the whole Italian people.

Premier Mussolini was following the situation closely and urging diplomatic representatives in countries anywhere near the zone where the Italia might be to do everything possible to speed up the search.

The Pope again remembered Gen. Nobile and his companions at his own early mass. He also asked that all ecclesiastical business be interrupted as soon as any definite word reached Rome regarding the explorer's whereabouts.

New York, May 28 (AP)—Commander Richard E. Byrd, the first explorer to fly over the North Pole, was confident today that General Umberto Nobile and his companions had landed the Italia, and there was an even chance they would be saved with the aid of the radio.

While the Italia could remain aloft, as a free balloon, for 14 days after its fuel was exhausted, Commander Byrd said he believed this to be more dangerous than to make a landing on an iceberg, deflate the ship and await relief.

"If the ship has been landed and deflated," he said, "so that food could be saved, it is possible for the crew to keep alive for some time and with the help of the radio they might be saved. But even so, that chance is a desperate one."

Their greatest hope is the radio, Byrd said. By constant working of the emergency set the position could be determined by a method of triangulation and aid summoned.

"It would not be a wise thing in case of a descent at a distance of 175 miles or more from the base," he said, "for the men to attempt to walk in as they might be caught on an ice field which had broken away from the mainland. Strong currents tend to carry these fields away from the King Bay district.

"The ice moves rapidly toward the Greenland coast, more rapidly than one could walk toward Spitsbergen. It is probable that if they could let rescuers know where they are a ship could go out and pick them up when they drift toward the Greenland coast."

FULLER IN MESSAGE MOVES TO BLOCK WATER BOOST

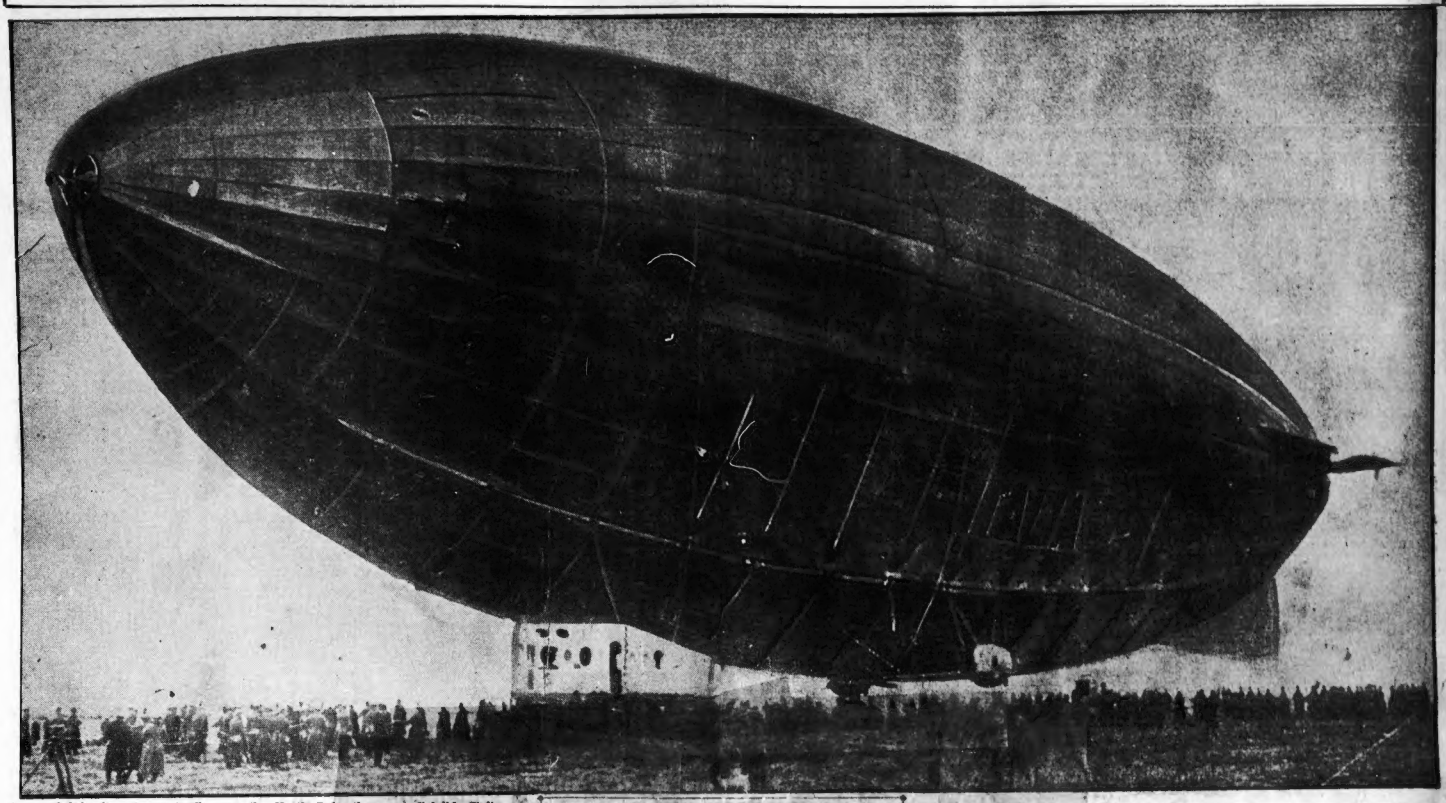
Fear that Boston and other metropolitan cities and towns faced an increase in water rates was somewhat alleviated today when Governor Fuller, in a special message to the Legislature, recommended the form of the $45,000,000 bond issue for reservoir developments be increased from 20 to 30 years. Mayor Nichols had estimated the 20-year bonds would necessitate a 29 per cent increase in Boston water rates and would "break the backs" of 20 cities and towns forced to retire the bonds in that period, as well as pay interest. It is obvious that rates must advance when it becomes necessary to build a new reservoir and bring water from 65 miles away, the Governor declared, but to be recessed the opinion there was justice in the requests of Boston and other communities for longer term bonds.

TRAFFIC RUNS WILD WHILE COPS WATCH; 3 MEN HURT

Parked by a police car in Western ave., Lynn, today Patrolman John Casey and John Saunier were looking over traffic conditions. Traffic seemed to be moving well, no serious delays, everybody orderly.

Whacko! Casey and Saunier landed on their heads in the street. The police car was 15 feet from where it had been and did not look like the same vehicle. Montgomery Meig of Winthrop ave., Revere, drove his machine into the parked car, police say. Both machines were wrecked and the three men slightly injured.

MISSING IN THE SILENCE OF THE FROZEN ARCTIC



Successful in its attempt to fly over the North Pole, the great dirigible Italia was swallowed up in the silence of the ice wastes of the Far North for days. Rescuers are combing the ice-locked Arctic regions for her. This picture shows the big aircraft being landed after tests for her polar flight. Note men clinging to ropes. Other polar explorers are offering their aid in the search for the missing air adventurers.

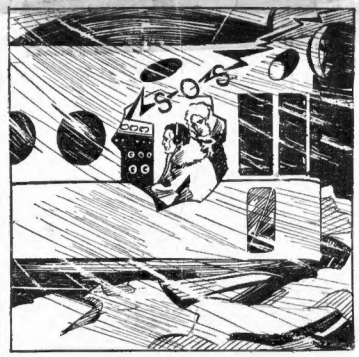
Their courage buoyed with hope, Mrs. Umberto Nobile, wife of the noted leader of the Italia expedition, and their daughter wait patiently in Rome for some definite word. Though 72 hours have elapsed since the last tangible message was received from the Italia, they still believe the explorers of the air will reach civilization safely.



This is the artist's conception of how the radio experts aboard the Italia attempted to send out the SOS signal when they realized they could not make their base.

Among those who offered aid in the search for Nobile is Lieut. Carl Eielson, pilot for Wilkins in Arctic.

General Umberto Nobile is here seen with some of the crew of the Italia. This view was taken at King's Bay, Spitzbergen, and is the first photograph to reach this country. Fifteen men accompanied Nobile on his flight. Some hours after the Italia had radioed its successful crossing over the North Pole the messages ceased and it is feared the great airship has met with disaster. Nobile's pet terrier Titania is the crew's mascot.

PHELAN, BACK FROM ITALY, PRAISES DUCE'S REGIME

Mussolini's regime has been "the saving of Italy, politically, economically and financially," in the opinion of James J. Phelan, Boston banker, who was back at his desk today at the offices of Hornblower & Weeks, in which firm he is a partner, after three months spent abroad, during which time he was decorated anew by Pope Pius.

ARBUCKLE ADMITS HE HAS PARTED FROM WIFE

Hollywood, Cal., May 28 (AP)—Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle, former screen comedian, admitted today that he and his wife, formerly Doris Deane, Pasadena society girl and film actress, had separated. He is living at a hotel. His wife is in their Beverly Hills home.

"We haven't gotten along happily for some time," Arbuckle said.

WAVENEY FARM MECCA FOR SOCIETY, SAYS BETTY ALDEN

Horse Lovers Will Gather at Reginald Bird's Framingham Estate Friday and Saturday

WAY BACK SOMETIME WHEN THE WORLD was young, Dame Nature and an all-seeing Providence conspired together to arrange a pretty lay of country out Framingham way to a large natural amphitheater smooth surfaced and grassy they added a terraced slope and backdrop of dense pine woods. Encircling all this they contrived acres of high, rolling sparsely wooded meadows. Seemingly they knew that some aeons later Reginald Bird would happen along, looking for a country estate perfectly arranged for horse show purposes.

WAVENEY FARM IN FRAMINGHAM IS THIS perfect setting, for the Millwood Hunt show. Next Friday and Saturday many slim legged, glossy coated horses will mince through their paces. For the two days the terraced slope will be crowded with smart and glossy motors belonging to the many who consider horse shows supremely edifying spectacles. Reginald Bird is staging another of those "biggest and best" shows for the local horsey gentry.

THE LARGEST FIELD AND THE MOST INTERESTING, and an enormous list of exhibitors and motor reservations; these are Millwood details and a June sun should shine on a colorful pageant of exhibitors. There are many listed for Millwood who follow zealously the present unbroken swirl of amateur sport.

SOMETIMES THEY ARE RAILBIRDS, OFTEN riders; certainly they are spectators versed on points and form. Miss Alice Thorndike and Mrs. I. Tucker Burr, Jr., regular followers of the baying hounds and straight, hard riders, are on the lists. Intrepid horsewomen, both, they are just back in this country from some weeks (cold, rainy weeks to be sure, but thrilling, nevertheless) of stiff hunting as Ireland does it. Little golden haired Ellen Harding and her sister, Joan, small girls who rode tall horses so superbly at the New Riding Club show, will be at Millwood; also Miss Miriam Winslow, Mrs. Channing Wells, Anne Sortwell, Patricia Bird, Mrs. Gardiner Fiske, Harold Tolman, Miss Ruth and Miss Dorothy Neyhart, Richard Saltonstall and Leverett Saltonstall, in fact the entire horse loving set.

IT WOULD NOT BE COMPLETE WERE GEN. PEABODY not there, or Henry Vaughan, Mrs. Richard Middlecott Saltonstall and those whose regard for the four-footed high stepper is almost a fetish. The motor brigade wheeling into choice places overlooking the Millwood ring will be especially horsey. Adah Neyhart, Mrs. George S. West, Mrs. Harry E. Robinson, Mrs. Thomas Lindsay, Mrs. Homer Loring, Nathaniel I. Bowditch, Robert Burnett, Mrs. Samuel Eliot, Charles F. Leland, Mrs. Manning Emery, Dr. Frederic B. Lund, W. H. Rand, Jr., J. D. Cameron Bradley, Mrs. Thomas M. James and J. P. Metcalf belong to it.

NATALIE B. MERRILL

Society girl has just returned from a trip abroad with her parents.

BUFFET LUNCHEON AT THE Manor House on Waveney Farm is always a pleasant midday interlude from the ring, with Mr. Bird host and his attractive daughters, Miss Betty and Miss Patricia, in evidence.

PARTICULAR PARAGRAPHS should be devoted to extolling certain particularly charming young women newly wedded to Boston young men. I make reference specially to Mrs. John Morse Elliott, who was snatched away from under the very noses of adoring masculine Chicagoans by a member of the Hub elite. Mrs. Elliott formerly Miss Janet Paulding, is to live in Boston, what time the honeymoon wandering abroad is ended and homecoming accomplished.

BOSTON'S YOUNGER MARRIED set will welcome open armed the young New Yorker, whom James Jackson, Jr., has grafted on to the local tree, via the marriage formula. She was Miss Sally Sears Pratt, brilliant eyed and sleek haired, a dynamic member of the Gotham social world. After protracted travel abroad, the "Jimmie" Jacksons, Jr., will come steaming home across the blue and then Boston will see something of the former Miss Pratt in the young matron role.

WASHINGTON CONTRIBUTES to the Bostonian younger married set a charming young thing; she is Miss Frances McKee, daughter of Mrs. Frederick Brooke. She becomes the bride of Charles Stone and in all probability nuptial vows will be given and received at a summertime wedding right here in Massachusetts.

MISS McKEE IS GOLDEN blonde and slender, and wears her Paris frocks with French chic aided by native American dash. Miss Natalie Bayard Merrill, recently of Paris and London, immediately of Stockbridge and presently of Newport, looks very smart as she trips down the avenue, whether it be New York's famous Park or Boston's Commonwealth. She has been abroad with her parents and with them will be in Newport later, when the season commences at the gilt edge Rhode Island spa.

ARGUE SUNDAY SPORTS BEFORE MINISTERS

Baptist ministers assembled in Chipman Hall, Tremont Temple, today, heard arguments for and against commercialized Sunday sports in Boston.

They were told on the one hand that every act of man is bad if it is not in violation of the natural law of Divine injunction, and on the other hand that professionalized Sunday sports is the opening wedge to legitimize Sunday labor.

Myles T. McSweeney, assistant sports editor of the Boston Evening American, addressed the ministers in the affirmative and Elmer E. Spears, Everett attorney, opposed. Spears took the place of Harold D. Wilson of the Lord's Day League, who could not appear.

"There is nothing immoral in sports on any day, Sunday included," McSweeney said. "The mere passing of money at the gate of a ball park does not make Sunday sports immoral. If it does, why do ministers take up collections on Sunday?

"These sports are not against the public welfare and no citizen has a right to hinder another in his exercise of mind or body on Sunday, provided such exercise does not interfere with the rights of others."

Spears said: "I see no reason why amateur baseball does not cover the ground completely. When we talk about the working man needing recreation on Sunday we must consider that he already, in many instances, gets a half-holiday on Saturday. With commercialized baseball he is compelled to spend his earnings to see a game which otherwise would not cost him a cent. It is an opening wedge to industrialize the Sunday to make it like an ordinary day instead of one of rest and legitimate recreation."

BOSTON OPERA SINGER HELD AS SHOPLIFTER

Nita Chalfonte, a native of Boston who has sung in opera in most of the capitals of Europe and America, was committed to Bellevue Hospital, New York, for observation today after being arraigned on a charge of shoplifting.

She is 24 and has been a vocal instructor with the Metropolitan Opera Company during the past few years. Two months ago she took up employment as a dressmaker. In court she exhibited a book of press clippings reviewing her appearances in this country and abroad.

SAYS DRY CZAR STOPPED QUIZ OF RICHES

Washington, May 28 (AP)—Testimony that several attempts had been made to investigate the activities of Frank J. Hale while Hale was a prohibition official was given to the Senate campaign funds committee today by Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant attorney general.

Hale's magazine, Politics, is opposing the candidacy of Herbert Hoover for President and the committee has been trying to learn about its financing.

Mrs. Willebrandt said when one of the inquiries had progressed to a point "when the truth would probably come out" Hale procured an endorsement from a Mr. Chamberlain, whom she described as "a close personal friend" of Lincoln C. Andrews, then assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of prohibition enforcement. The investigation was stopped.

The inquiry had disclosed, she said, that immediately after Chamberlain endorsed Hale the latter was put in control of alcohol permits in New York and Chamberlain showed a very much improved financial condition.

Chamberlain started making deposits from $1000 to $3000 a month, she said, adding that in a little more than a year he put $90,000 in one bank and $65,000 in another.

She told the committee that on one occasion Chamberlain made an all-night visit with Hale and later showed 20 $1000 bills.

Pinchot Flays Mellon and Vare for Corruption

Washington, May 28 (INS)—The Vare machine in Philadelphia and the Mellon machine in Pittsburgh were guilty of "cheating and vote-stealing" at every election in Pennsylvania since 1922, former Gov. Gifford Pinchot testified today before the Senate elections committee on the contest of William B. Wilson (D), to unseat Senator-elect Vare (R).

Pinchot said his charges of fraud were based on what he was told by election officials, what he read in newspapers and "my general knowledge of election conditions in Pennsylvania."

DRINKS POISON AS JUDGE SENTENCES HIM TO JAIL

Sentenced to jail for non-support, Albert Francis, 50, attempted suicide by drinking iodine today in the detention pen in the rear of the municipal courtroom. He had just been led to the pen by Court Officer Edward Hayes when he put the vial to his lips and drained it. He collapsed and court attaches rushed to the spot. Judge Michael Murray, who was sitting on the case but who chanced to be in the room, ordered him removed to the Relief Hospital. Doctors reported he would recover. Francis lives on Oswego st., South End.

HORACE B. LIVERIGHT'S WIFE GIVEN DIVORCE

New York, May 28 (AP)—An interlocutory decree of divorce was granted today to Mrs. Lucille E. Liveright against Horace B. Liveright, head of the publishing firm of Boni & Liveright. The decree will become final in 90 days and Mrs. Liveright will obtain the custody of two children.

The Liverights have been living apart for more than a year under a separation agreement which allowed Mrs. Liveright alimony of $5000 yearly. Her complaint charged that the publisher had been a guest at a hotel in Croton-on-the-Hudson, accompanied by a woman whose identity was not disclosed.

FULLER SIGNS TO BOOST AVIATION

The cause of aviation in the Bay State received a boost today when Governor Fuller signed the bill authorizing cities and towns to appropriate and borrow money for airport purposes.

The Governor also signed the bill prohibiting the cropping of dogs' ears and the exhibition of such dogs at shows.

The airport law is considered of extreme importance in the development of aviation in Massachusetts consistent with its progress in other parts of the country and the world.

Many cities and towns, some of them linking together in joint enterprises, are expected to take advantage immediately of the opportunity presented by the new law.

The law relating to dogs does not become effective until September 1 and dogs cropped before that date can be exhibited. A fine of not more than $250 is prescribed for cropping. Possession of a dog with unhealed ears is to be considered prima facie evidence of cropping by the owner.

Where cropping is considered necessary, a certified statement from a registered veterinary will enable the owner to avoid prosecution under the law.

OPEN SAFE IN DRUG STORE IS ROBBED OF $400

Thieves, fortunate in finding an open safe, rifled it of $400, it was reported today by proprietors of a drug store in Chelsea st., Charlestown. The loss was discovered when the store opened for business today. Police believe the thieves hid in the store last night before closing time and made their exit by forcing a hasp and two bars on the cellar door.

PROMOTION OF SAFETY A JOB FOR US ALL

By FRANK A. GOODWIN.
Highway Safety Editor Boston Evening American and Former Registrar of Motor Vehicles for Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

When all is said and done, the whole idea of safety simmers down to the individual.

It is a matter of individual duty and responsibility for all those old enough to exercise their caution and judgment.

Promoting safety on the highway is MY JOB and YOUR JOB.

Everybody is vitally concerned. No one knows who will be the next victim. So be constantly on your guard and do your bit in safeguarding others.

In my safety chats from day to day I have told of the wonderful work being done by mothers and teachers. There are many good Samaritans quietly and modestly doing their shares in this great cause.

And today I would like to introduce Safety Officer Patrick F. Shea of the Cambridge police department who has done yeoman work in the field of accident prevention.

Shea tackles the problem by means of the three R's. He has turned author and published a book, a volume of less than 100 pages, entitled "Safety Prevention," published by D. C. Heath & Co., of Boston.

Patrick F. Shea

A Safety Manual

Safety Officer Shea calls his book a manual for teachers and pupils a safety program under the supervision of Chief of Police John A. McBride and Michael E. Fitzgerald, LL. D., superintendent of the Cambridge public schools. Shea's text book has been approved by the Cambridge school committee and has stirred favorable comment.

Shea uses arithmatic, penmanship, grammar, drawing and other mediums to drive home his lessons in safety and accident prevention to the school children of Cambridge.

He joined the Cambridge force after serving in the World War. He did duty as a motorcycle officer and later was traffic officer in Harvard sq. A year ago he was given the berth of safety officer and has met with great success.

In his book, Safety Officer Shea uses what he terms the "Safety Alphabet," as follows:

X is for Xtra.
(I that you'll allow.)
So be Xtra careful.
FOREVER—and NOW.

And there is the case of Hyman Freedman, fruit pedlar, of 74 Poplar st., West End, who was so moved by seeing a boy crushed to death under the wheels of a truck in Leverett st. that he went out on the street corners at night preaching safety to children and adults, giving his time and energy without looking for a penny in compensation, but rewarded by the consciousness that he might save someone from death or injury.

"At first it was hard to interest people," said Freedman, "but gradually my street meetings drew crowds. Captain McDevitt of the Joy street station helped me in every way. He gladly gave me a permit because he told me I was helping the police and the public. After a while I went into schools and gave safety talks. Then I spoke for the Boston Automobile Club in its safety drives.

H. Freedman

"Accidents are the result of carelessness. People are thinking of something else. They must be taught to concentrate when walking or driving in busy streets. The driver should help the pedestrian and the pedestrian co-operate with the driver. There should be more team work, more individual interest and effort. Everybody is in danger. Therefore, it's everybody's business to promote safety."

JUGOSLAVS IN RIOTS AGAINST ITALIAN DECREE

Belgrade, Jugoslavia, May 28 (AP)—Belgrade newspapers today said Italian Fascists attacked the Jugoslav Consulate at Zara Sunday and injured Consul Simitch. Anti-Italian riots occurred in Zara over the decision of the Jugoslavian government to ratify the Nettuno conventions, which would permit Italian citizens to own land within 30 miles of the Adriatic coast of Jugoslavia. Italian clubrooms were demolished, an Italian flag burnt and windows of the Italian consulate smashed.

AIRPLANE MANUFACTURE IN U. S. INCREASES 65 P. C.

Washington, May 28 (AP)—Airplane manufacture in the United States increased in quantity output 65 per cent in 1927 over 1926, and in value, 60 per cent according to estimates made today by the census bureau. The actual total of airplanes, seaplanes, and amphibians made last year was 1962, against 1188 in 1926, while the value rose from $8,571,027 in 1926 to 14,250,693 in 1927. There were 61 aircraft manufacturing establishments operating in 1927.

C. E. MONTAGUE, NOTED ENGLISH AUTHOR, DIES

Manchester, Eng., May 28 (AP)—Charles Edward Montague, one of England's best known writers, died of pneumonia today. He was a son-in-law of C. P. Scott, editor of the Manchester Guardian. For many years Mr. Montague was the chief editorial writer of the Guardian. He was the author of several novels.

1 SLAIN, 2 HURT IN $15,000 INN ROBBERY

New York, May 28 (INS)—Used as a shield by six bandits who raided the Actors' Inn, an all-night cafe, at 51 East Seventh st. early today, one taxi driver was shot down and killed and two others seriously wounded in the confused fight which followed the bandits' safe escape.

The six gunmen looted the 60 patrons of the cafe, the manager and the help of money and jewelry worth between $15,000 and $20,000.

Taft Tells Puzzled Boy to Get on Job at School

Somerville, N. J., May 28 (AP)—Gilbert Smith, Jr., 13, has a personal letter from Chief Justice Taft advising him to pay more attention to routine school problems.

Gilbert had been suffering from a hypothetical question which no one about town, including his father, teacher, a former judge and a former prosecutor could answer, so he submitted it to the Department of Justice. The question was: Of the French ambassador at Washington was murdered by the English ambassador, which would have jurisdiction?"

The reply expressed a lack of information on the problem of diplomatic homicides and was a bitter disappointment to Gilbert until he reached the end of the letter and saw the signature.

QUITS HUSBAND SHE "LOOKED AT 40 YEARS"

Ashton Clinton, England, May 28 (AP)—After 40 years of married life Mrs. Charles Hawkins has been granted legal separation from her husband.

They got tired of seeing each other, the wife said.

The Hawkinses are the parents of 12 children. He is 63 and she is 60.

"I waited on my husband too much," Mrs. Hawkins explained. "In our 40 years together I never took a vacation."

WOMAN SHOOTS PROWLER, THEN ROUTS TWO

Awakened by men trying to force open a kitchen window, Mrs. Winifred Craig, 30, of Marshall st., North Revere, opened fire on them with a 22 calibre rifle, wounding one of them, and gave chase in her night clothing as they fled in the darkness.

She reported to police she believes the intruders were members of a bootlegging gang whose activities she had called to the attention of the authorities, with several raids resulting.

Finding blood stains on the ground and on the wall of a garage in the rear of the Craig house, police notified all doctors and hospitals in the vicinity to report anyone calling for treatment for gunshot wounds.

The scene of the shooting is in an isolated part of the city. Mrs. Craig's husband is a Canadian war veteran. Because of alleged threats from bootleggers, she obtained a permit last November to carry a revolver, while the rifle was a gift from her husband before her marriage.

The husband accompanied her when she crept softly downstairs to rout the two men early today, but Mrs. Craig led the attack. She fired from a window and both men begged her to stop firing as they fled. The wounded man fell but scrambled to his feet and got away as she ran to the door and followed across the yard.

Because of the distance to the nearest telephone, the Craigs sat up the rest of the night, watching for the return of the trespassers, and Mrs. Craig notified the police at daylight.

WALTHAM MAN SLAIN IN ROW OVER GIRL

One man was stabbed to death in a fight in Waltham today and another, who acted as peacemaker, was fatally slashed. A third is under arrest charged with murder.

Salvatore Marabito, 43, with a wife and four children in Italy, is the slain man. Accused of his death is Constantino Girardi, 31.

The stabbing followed an argument in a lodging house in Bun st., Waltham. Marabito, police said, made a remark about Mrs. M. Carmi, young married daughter of Sabatino Critite, who conducts the lodging house. Girardi, it is alleged, resented Marabito's remark that "Married women shouldn't stay out so late."

Marabito was stabbed eight times. Antonia Lombardo of Palfrey st., Waltham, attempted to end the fight, but was stabbed twice.

In Waltham court, where Girardi was arraigned for murder, the case was continued until June 7. Lombardo, because of his injuries, could not appear as a material witness.

Webster Clerk Robbed

Webster, May 28 (AP)—Leo Dragon, 30, a clerk in the shoe store of Mrs. Mary Duffy, was blackjacked by a youthful robber and robbed of $200 today as he opened the store.

Many People

can tell our characters by our hands because they betray our characteristics. Even if we haven't been blessed with strong, vital hands we may all have beautiful hands if we use the dainty delightful Peggy Sage Manicure Products, on sale at C. F. Hovey & Co., 8th floor, Summer St., Toilet Goods Dept., first floor. Peggy Sage Nicotine Remover is priced at $1. The Frederics Method permanents are being given by The Beauty Shop, on the 3rd floor, of Filene's, at 417 Washington St. The waves are wide and natural, and this method does not alter the shade of either gray hair or delicate colored hair. The price is $10, which includes the shampoo and wave set. "Contouration Treatments" which correct the contour, reduce localized fat and iron out lines and wrinkles, making dry, sensitive skin like softest satin, may be had at this delightful Shop where every line of beauty culture is available.

Patsy and Ruth made a special trip in town last week to visit Mendelsohn's, at 59 Temple Pl., Blake Bldg., Room 506, for what do you suppose happened there? They have a few of those $5 used evening gowns, and they are selling them every one at $1 apiece. Of course they have to be cleaned, but it would pay to buy two or three of them. Also he has some bridal gowns which are new and very soft and lovely in satin, lace and georgette, priced at $15. These are really worth much more. They also have bridal outfits for hire and made to order.

What An Unhappy Man

your dad was when he discovered the graying hair above his ears. wasn't he, Annes? and how overjoyed he was after he had visited S. S. Pierce, Company, at 69 Tremont St., for some of Ann J. MacHale's Hair Color Restorer. He applied it steadily for a while and soon the natural color returned. As I told you it is not a dye, it just restores the color. It tones up the hair, cures irritation of the scalp, cures dandruff and promotes a strong growth, making your hair shining and lustrous. The price is $1 a bottle.

I Have Been Out in the Country for my Maytime visit to Grace. For always when apple blossoms come and their orchard is in bloom I go out there. This time I found Cleien before the mirror admiring her hair, as well she might, for it was lovely. I have never seen it so beautiful, so filled with life and glowing with healthy sheen. She told me that she had been using Jane Curran's preparations, on sale in Filene's Toilet Goods Department, first floor. She had rather lifeless hair, you remember, and she used the Jane Curran Brightening Tonic, which is made for either a dry or an oily condition. It helps bring back natural color and gives your hair new life and lustre. This is priced at $1.50 a bottle. The Brilliantine (Liquid) priced at $1 gives your hair a lovely sheen. It contains no alcohol and it is faintly and delightfully scented with Jasmin. Just a drop of this applied to the hair brings instant beauty and lustre. Hair may be restored to its own natural gleaming, shiny loveliness by use of these delightful preparations. By the consistent use of them at home Helen's hair is so very lovely. I want you to get some, Annes!

Have You Noticed

the golden glint in our Beth's hair of late? It has always been sunny golden hair but now it is so beautiful. She has been using Fiozor—put up by Lesquendieu of Paris, and sold exclusively by Meyer Jonasson & Co., Toiletries Dept., first floor, Tremont and Boylston Sts. Fiozor is a hair lightener and beautifier made from an extract of camomile and is good for blondes and brunettes. Beth applies it after her hair has been thoroughly shampooed and dried and that is why you notice that golden glint that was not there before. Fiozor retails at $2.50.

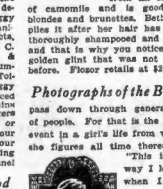
Photographs of the Bride pass down through generations of people. For that is the great event in a girl's life from which she figures all time thereafter.



"This is the way I looked when I was married!" How often you hear that, Anne! Warren Kay Studio at 504 Boylston st. is making a special offer for June only of photographs at $10 a dozen, rare photographs with superb etching finish. There is also a 10x14 enlargement free. Perhaps you are graduating or are going to be confirmed. Whatever the event may be or the time, it doesn't make one bit of difference. It means that you should visit the Warren Kay Studio.

With Dainty Ruffles

flowered with roses in rose, blue and gold are curtains in double ruffled voile, priced at $1.19 a pair at Lepie's, 54 Chauncy Street. They are so attractive for the new bride's home to add a dainty charming touch to her guest room. Or perhaps she'd prefer some filet net ones with lace edge priced at $1.25. There are still some of those adorable seven-piece voile cottage sets with silk edge trimming in the same colors or green priced at $8a a set. There are lovely silk puffs, bed spreads and pillows for the little bride who loves her home.

Permanent Waves

are guaranteed by L. Cunningham, Superior Service Beauty Shoppe at 561 Boylston St., Copley Square. For this month only the price is $10 and you may have a large, deep, loose, or tight Marcel Permanent, with round ringlets or Macaroni Curls. All the waves are wrapped for ringlet ends. You describe the style you want in this unusual shop, and they give it to you, waving your hair in soft waves or gently resetting old permanents. The Nestle Circuline and Frederics Vita-Tonic Compound methods are used. Telephone Back Bay 9069 for appointments away to China on her honeymoon. She only had a little time to get ready for her wedding because Bob was transferred and she wanted to go along. But you should have seen her clothes and the wedding party. She went up to Evelyn's, at 8 Winter Street, and got a beautiful wedding gown and dresses in soft beautiful colors for her bridesmaids. Then she got frocks for afternoon, and lovely evening dresses for her trousseau. Her wardrobe is quite complete for any occasion. The prices are amazing, $12.95 and up, with many good values for $8.95.

Blanche Is Sailing

Come With Me

now to visit the "Shop of Personal Service," because in this day and age Miss Modern Girl realizes that corsetettes which follow the natural lines of the figure are best for health, comfort and style. For $4.95 we may get a fine well fitting corsetette with soft swami top or made of satin. There are a few girdles or elastic step-ins priced at $2.95 and a special lot of rayon underwear, the vests priced at $1 and the bloomers at $1.95, which are especially good values at that price. There are many other lovely things at the Naturaline Corset Co., Lawrence Bldg., 24 West St., Room 710, or Coolidge Corner Arcade, Shop 6, Brookline.

For Shower Gifts

and wedding gifts or for the girl who is "trunking," I want to suggest—exquisite hand-embroidered linen scarfs for tables, dressers or buffets.

These are imported from sunny Spain and come in twenty designs in effective Spanish attitchery—solid embroideries, cut-out embroideries and hemstitching on fine oyster linen, 36", 45", 54" lengths to match. They are very unusual looking and are actually half price—the price range is from $4 to $7. You will find them on the third floor in the embroidery department of The R. H. Stearns Company, Tremont St. and Temple Place.

The Spanish Galleries of Chandler & Co., Tremont St. at West, have certainly favored us all greatly by letting us have that alluring department with $10.00 dresses.

We'll find everything in the line of dresses that even the most discriminating person might desire. I do adore the printed chiffons in every color, designs from polka dots to large floral patterns and the fish crepes in plain colors. The sport dresses are in plain styles and fairy pastel shades. Then there are soft white graduation dresses and filmy white ones for proms and Junatime parties. The sizes run from 12 to 46. Let's pick out a white dress for Shirley!

My Small June Bride is wondrous fair and I am helping her with all her plans for her wedding. Of course she is having her wedding invitations engraved at A. Stowell & Co., Inc., 24 Winter St. They do visiting cards, and also crests and die stamping at moderate prices, sending samples upon request. There are many delightful wedding gifts that my little bride would just adore. A large metal three-piece Coffee Set and Tray priced at $75; Heavy Sterling Water Pitcher, $60; Heavy Sterling Sugar and Cream Set, $30; Steak Set with silver handles and guard and stainless blade, $5, and last but not least, "John Alden" Teaspoons, priced from $18 to $24 a dozen. Let's visit Stowell's and see these lovely wedding gifts!

"What Is So Rare

as a day in June?"—A sweet June bride, to be sure, dressed for her wedding with a veil floating like mist about her as she faces "The Great Adventure." Audrey at 110 Tremont St., 4th floor, New Studio Bldg., is having a special sale on veils so white and exquisitely fine and soft that you'll adore them. She is also prepared to supply the bridesmaids' hats in any color you desire. There is a special price this week on a few hats already made of $3.50. You may order hats of every description priced from $3.50 up in all the smart springtime styles and colors.

For New York Styles

and gorgeous fabrics you must visit our friend, Mr. Al. H. Gross. He has been over to New York again and has just returned with more of those lovely one-of-a-kind dresses designed to delight the hearts of women. They are priced at $10.75. I know you'd like the dainty silk underwear and the hosiery on sale and that you'll be glad to know that the drastic reduction in prices is still available at The Grace Gown Shoppe, at 41 Winter st., Room 85.

While My Sister

was waiting to make an appointment at the Post Institute last week she overheard a customer say: "I am sorry that I did not come in here before. I have known about you for weeks and I thought this was a beauty shop, but it is quite different. My face never looked as well before. I can see that by using your Beauty Course regularly I could obtain a wonderful natural complexion." That was enough for my sister. She got a $5 facial demonstration for $2, and she can't say enough in praise now of the Post Institute, 6 Beacon st., Room 810.

No Matter

how tired you are at night dear, don't forget Viroxol Face Bath, priced at $1.25, at The Shepard Stores, at 30 Winter St., Toilet Goods Dept., first floor. Is a fine freshener for your skin, a good astringent and whitener and prevents the undoubted effect of our New England climate. It corrects large pores and is designed to take care of its cleansing needs and will make your skin so white and fair. The Almond Cream is a good skin food and cleanser and the fragrant Viroxol Face Powder is made of pure ingredients and good for the finest skin. I love these products, Anne!

How Proud Milady Is

of her sheer soft chiffon hosiery. And how hard she tries to repair it so that it will not show where it is mended. Jordan Marsh Company have a Hosiery Repair Desk on the Street Floor, of the Main Store, where runs are mended so they are practically invisible. The price is 25c for a single thread run under 5 inches long; 35c for one over 5 inches long; 10c for a second thread run; 5c for each additional thread run; 15c for first inch of pulled thread, 10c for each additional inch. Lace and Net Hose is repaired by hand by skilled lace workers. What a precious service this is for us, Anne!

There Are So Many Things

in life to make us comfortable and now along comes the comfortable permanent wave given at the shop of L. Max, 154 Boylston St., entire third floor. The operators are expert and they give careful and detailed attention to the texture of your hair and to winding it. It's so very pleasant to go to this perfect shop, and it's rather joyous, Anne, to find your hair in wide natural waves exactly like a marcel when you come out. For treating hair spoiled by harsh dyes and bringing it back to its natural color, L. Max is unequalled, and he is very successful in dyeing hair also. Telephone Capitol 5831 for appointments.

You'll Find Some

more of those lovely georgette and crepe afternoon dresses and satin and taffeta evening dresses at The Hugh J. Bradley, Inc., Women's Wearing Apparel Shop at 8 St. James Ave., Park Square Bldg., still priced at $7.50. They are regular $15 values and come in all sizes. Summer silks seem to belong there they are so beautiful, in their colorful polka dots and figured crepes. They are priced at $15. There are still some smart hats left priced at $2. And many beautiful hats for all occasions priced at $4.95. I do look forward to visiting this shop, Anne!

Superfluous Hair

is not a necessary evil these days for you can have it removed painlessly and permanently by calling Liberty 4466 and making an appointment with James Brooks, electrolysis specialist at 109 Boylston St., Suite 738. He removes all traces of it and it will not return, for the reasonable price of $2 and $3 an hour and he guarantees satisfaction. In these days of charming women it is quite out of accord with the times to appear in public with superfluous hair which spoils even the most beautiful face. Tell your friends about this, dear!

Normal Development

may be yours if you follow natural laws which are Nature's safe and sane way to a slender body and health. Overweight, incorrect posture, shallow breathing, puffy ankles, fallen arches and other repulsive characteristics of advancing age are not part of Nature's plan. Since food and exercise play an important part in the essentials of health we should select a balanced diet of foods and study the Science of Nutrition according to the latest development and the road to corrective exercises. For information on this apply to Institute of Normal Development, 397 Boylston St., or telephone Kenmore 4230.

Loving you always,

Priscilla

29 ARE TAKEN DOWN LADDERS IN LYNN

Opening the hall door he was sent staggering back by a cloud of smoke and a burst of flame. He roused his wife and daughter, Dorothy, nine, and helped them out a window. Then he jumped out himself and went along the side of the house smashing all the windows on the ground floor and awakening the occupants.

A neighbor, William Krasnow, sent in an alarm. The first fireman on the scene was Edward Hogan of Chemical 1, who lives behind the apartment block and who dashed to the blazing building in his pajamas. He found it impossible to enter the door.

Nine ladders were shot up on all sides of the structure and the trapped tenants were handed down chains of firemen. Meanwhile with hose lines firemen succeeded in getting at the fire from above and drowning it out. In trying to penetrate the mass of smoke and flames from below, Lieut. William Doherty and Enginemen Bernard Dondy and Arthur Peabody were blown down the front steps, but they were uninjured and went back to duty.

Miss Rose Hirshberg, 16, one of those rescued from the third floor, fainted at the foot of the ladder down which she was carried and was carried to a neighbor's house for treatment. Several of those rescued were aged men and women.

Besides the Greenvalges, those who escaped from the ground floor were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Goldstein and their son, Albert, 14; Mrs. Minnie Katz and daughter, Gertrude, five; Mr. and Mrs. Louis Yaffa.

Those saved from the upper stories were Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Hirshery and Rose Hirshery; Mr. and Mrs. Philip Kramer; Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Sherzer; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Steck; Mr. and Mrs. David Hirshery, Bernard, 10, and Helen, five; Mr. and Mrs. Hyman German; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Singer and Bernard, five; Mr. and Mrs. Rubin Shore, Ethel, three, and Bernard, six months; Simon Fallman and Sophie Fallman, 18; Mrs. Rebecca Rafey and Frances Rafey, 21; Mr. and Mrs. Constantino Gatree and Elizabeth, five.

Damage to the building was estimated at $5000 by Deputy Chief William Welch. This figure did not include loss to the occupants, whose apartments were damaged by smoke and water and their furniture blistered by the heat.

The men who were rescued and arrested and finally released were Ernest Schoening of Boston, William C. Martin, John Wilson and John silva of New York, and Albert White of Belfast, Me. FULLER VETOES BILL TO RETAIN BOYNTON

Governor Fuller today vetoed a bill passed by the Legislature to retain Herbert H. Boynton, deputy secretary of state, beyond his 70th birthday, the retirement age. The retention was for the period beginning June 21 and continuing until the end of the present year. It was contended Boynton's services would be indispensible for the coming primaries and election. In his veto Governor Fuller said the law for retirement at 70 was absolutely vital to the efficiency of civil service.

You'll Have To Give This Little Girl a Hand!

"Patsy" was bright but bashful, itiful but ingenuous. She had to sit by while her big sister, the pampered pet of the front parlor, got all the good things of life — but finally she met a man who started her upon the right road to romance. What did the boy friend tell her?

First—Get personality; no man ever loved a girl who didn't stand out from the mob.

Second—Flatter 'em—all men love flattery.

Third—At the proper time be indifferent; no man wants what he has already, and he'll appreciate a girl in direct proportion to the difficulty of winning her.

Did she heed his advice? Oh, boy! You'll simply have to give this little girl a hand! One of the funniest pictures ever made. As Patsy, Marion Davies skyrockets to the very top rank of screen comediennes.

A HOME PAPER FOR PEOPLE WHO THINK

BOSTON, MONDAY, MAY 28, 1928

"LITTLE SINS" By KATHARNE BRUSH

A Story of Gay Life and a Battle of Hearts

CHAPTER 25

IT was while they rolled toward New York on a morning train that Mrs. Minafee made the odd discovery. Odd, that is, to Dolly's way of thinking. Mrs. Minafee herself was not at all puzzled and only mildly interested.

She had been perusing a newspaper, and she lowered it to say to Dolly, "What was the name of that yellow-haired hussy at dinner the other night, do you recall?"

"Gay Leonard."

"I thought so." Mrs. Minafee shook and biffed and folded the newspaper, and passed it over. "Read that," she commanded, supplementing through tightened lips, "And I hope he beats her!"

Dolly read:

New York Couple Elope to Maryland. Miss Gay Leonard Weds Son of Julian M. Pomeroy.

Elkton, Md., Sept. 11—Miss Gay Leonard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Harrison Leonard of East 63d st., New York, and Alan Pomeroy, son of Julian M. Pomeroy, head of the Pomeroy Advertising Agency, were married early this morning by the Rev. Dr. William P. Kane after motoring here from Ventor, New Jersey. Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Matthews of New York, Southampton and Ventor, and Jacques Vallois, a chauffeur, were the only witnesses.

Mr. Pomeroy is a graduate of Yale, class of 1924. He is a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity and was prominent in university athletics. During the World War he served with the Royal Flying Corps.

Mrs. Pomeroy attended Miss Madison's School on the Hudson.

Following an automobile honeymoon, the couple will live in New York, where Mr. Pomeroy is in business with his father.

"September 11th," murmured Dolly. "This is the 12th. Then it was the very next morning—"

Mrs. Minafee nodded. "You see," she said, "you were 'way off. Remember you said she must be in love with Mr. Jerry Davis herself? Nobody would've been so disagreeable just for no reason, Mimsh'l, you said. And all the time she was about to get married to this other fella."

But Dolly, remembering the cruel little voice, remembering the brown eyes that had hated her, remembering many, many things, wondered. . . . . .

Brooks Cling's studio was not the artist's studio of film and fiction. It was a workroom, not a showroom.

Adjoining the studio there was a dressing room, a bath and a kitchenette. The suite (which Cling used only as a shop, having his home elsewhere) was the topmost of the five suites into which a brownstone house in the West Sixties had disintegrated. There was no elevator.

Cling was standing in the open door at the head of the stairway, shoulder against the frame. He wore a blue smock and had a pipe in his mouth. When Dolly came within two steps of him he swooped down and relieved her of her suitcase.

"Well!" he said. "Models bring their costumes in hatboxes usually. Sometimes in pill boxes."

Dolly explained that she had been unable to decide which frock to bring and hence had brought three "so you can choose."

Cling shooed her into the studio. "Sit down," he suggested, indicating the sofa. "How are you today?"

"Just fine, thank you."

"I'm glad you came."

"Did you think I wouldn't?"

He shook his head, smiling. "No. But I'll bet you hated to leave the

SENATE CALLS JOINT RUM INQUIRY

FORGRAVE SAYS HE IS WILLING TO TESTIFY

The State House rum investigation by the Legislature got under way today at a private session of the joint rules committee of House and Senate, following reading in the Senate of Governor Fuller's message requesting a thorough public inquiry.

Without debate and just the merest formality of a vote, the members of the Senate referred the Governor's request to the Rules Committee, instructing it to act jointly with the same committee from the House, which took similar action Friday.

The initial meeting of the committee was enveloped in secrecy, but it was understood the question of methods to procedure was brought up.

The joint committee is large and considered unwieldly for conducting such an investigation, but whether or not a smaller group will be designated to handle the probe is not yet known. Both President Wellington Wells of the Senate and Speaker John C. Hull of the House are members.

There was a surprise when it became known today that William M. Forgrave, State superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, has signified his willingness to testify before the joint committee.

His willingness to testify was expressed in a letter from him to Speaker Hull of the House in which he wrote that the proposed investigation was "a step in the right direction." He then stated that he would appear and present evidence.

Previously it was understood on Beacon Hill that Forgrave would have nothing to do with any investigation other than one conducted by "an unprejudiced committee of outsiders."

He had refused to appear before the rules committee of the House which held a hearing Friday and adjourned when nobody appeared to present charges or evidence.

Charles P. Howard, chairman of the administration and finance commission, which at the Governor's behest has conducted an investigation of charges that liquor held by the state police was distributed to favored individuals, said today that the work of going over the evidence is a gigantic task, but he hopes to report to the chief executive this week. The commission will hear one more witness later in the week, but meanwhile the report is in the making.

GORKY IS KISSED AND ACCLAIMED AFTER EXILE

Moscow, May 28 (AP)—Huge crowds of workmen and students cheered Maxim Gorky, famous writer, as Nicolai Buchanin, head of the left wing of the Soviet Central committee, embraced and kissed him on his arrival today at Alexandrovsky station. Gorky has been virtually exiled from Russia for many years.

43 LOVE SUITS IN DAY RECORD FOR COURT

A chubby chap with a bow slung over his shoulder and a handful of broken arrows sat weeping upon the steps of East Cambridge court today when Chief Justice Walter Perley Hall arrived to preside at a session of Superior Civil court.

"You look like Dan Cupid," said the judge. "What are you crying for?"

"Because I am Dan Cupid," replied the little fellow.

So Judge Hall stepped into court there to be presented with a list of 43 divorce cases up for hearing today. It was a record for Middlesex county with two sessions of probate and one of civil equity to hear them.

Judge Hall sat in one session while Judge John C. Leggat and Judge Arthur E. Beane presided in probate. There were 37 cases to be heard in probate and six in civil session.

The large majority of applicants for divorce won their pleas. Cases of a few were continued and those of a small number dismissed.

Among the first to receive a decree was Mrs. Ethyl McHarvey of Melrose whose first husband died June, 1927, and who married Arthur L. Harvey last November, after a three weeks' courtship.

William L. Dyson of Concord celebrated last Thanksgiving Christmas and New Year's Day by losing his wife, according to testimony by Mrs. Rose M. Dyson, who won a decree nisi. She was given custody of Mildred, 18, was corroborated her mother's story.

For cruel and abusive treatment, Mrs. Keith S. Phinney of Winchester received a divorce from Roger H. Phinney. Mrs. Eleanor Sise of Boston testified to acts of cruelty and abuse by Phinney.

Leonard J. Doyle, young Waltham policeman, threatened his wife, Madeleine, with a revolver, she told the court. She was awarded a divorce on the grounds of cruelty. Judge Leggatt remarked on the seriousness of the charge.

Earl L. Mansfield of Waltham was one of the few male applicants for return to single bliss. He charged his wife, Amanda, with desertion, among other things, and won a decree.

THE VERSATILE CORN FLAKE IS THE FOUNDATION OF MANY DISHES

HERE ARE A FEW USES FOR CRISP, CRUNCHY CORN FLAKES

Corn Flakes Will Help Out on Menus

THERE'S one item that you can always be sure of finding on my pantry shelf, and that is corn flakes. Not only are they a family favorite as a breakfast dish—especially at this time of year with strawberries and cream—but they furnish the basis of many other delicious dishes.

For instance, 2 cups of corn flakes added to the usual ingredients for spice cookies, are a vast improvement. The recipe I use calls for ¾ cup shortening, 1 cup sugar, 1 egg, 1-2 cup milk, 3½ cups flour, 1 tsp. cinnamon, ½ tsp. cloves, ½ tsp. salt, ½ tsp. soda, 1 cup raisins and 2 cups corn flakes. Cream the shortening, add the sugar, egg and milk.

Add the sifted dry ingredients, the raisins and the corn flakes. Roll the dough thin, cut into rounds and bake in a moderate (370 degrees F.) oven for about 10 minutes.

Corn Flake Candy is as wholesome as it is delicious. My recipe calls for 2 cups granulated sugar, 1 cup brown sugar, ½ cup light corn syrup, 1 cup water, ¼ cup butter, 1½ cups corn flakes. Put the sugars, the corn syrup and water in saucepan and cook, stirring until sugar is dissolved. Cook without stirring until temperature 300 degrees F. is reached.

Remove from fire, add butter, stir only enough to mix well. If much stirring is done the brittle will sugar. Add the corn flakes and turn at once on a greased slab or baking sheet and smooth out with spatula.

After about half a minute take hold of the edges of the candy and lifting it slightly from the slab pull it as thin as possible. Break into irregular pieces. Three hundred degrees F. means when the candy makes a very brittle ball in cold water. This makes 50 pieces.

Corn Flake Macaroons have become a standby in the Martha Lee Kitchen when we want to make something particularly easy, delicious and not too expensive.

For this we use 2 egg whites, 1 cup sugar, ½ teaspoon vanilla, 3 cup cocoanut, 2 cups corn flakes and ½ cup chopped nut meats. Beat the egg whites stiff, add the sugar gradually, then vanilla, cocoanut, corn flakes and nut meats. Drop by spoonfuls in a buttered pan and bake in a moderate oven 400 degrees F. until the macaroons are a delicate brown.

Make the matchless summer drink

Food Peril Lies in Summer Dainty

Dr. P. N. Mullowney

Director of Hearst Health Laboratory

Guard your children against dangers from summer foods and summer delicacies. Tardy as the season has been, the warm weather is now at hand, and with warm weather come warm weather threats against the child and his wholly-natural taste for sweets sold by the itinerant vendor.

Therefore this warning from the Hearst Health Laboratory:

Few things have more important bearing on the health of the little child than to see that the foodstuffs offered for his or her delectation are properly safeguarded. In this article I will endeavor to describe some features that must be looked out for.

Dr. Mullowney

It is only natural that ices and cooling drinks sold for a modest sum will have an urgent appeal to the limited spending means of the youngsters. And it is this slender margin of profit which carries with it a serious menace.

The scale of penny profit does not permit any system of complicated mechanics to be installed. Rather does it appeal to the impecunious manufacturer of little means and less resources.

PURITY NECESSARY

It does not by the very nature of things embrace a man of long and successful experience, equipped with means for proper sterilization and pure production.

It does, however, call into existence the attempt of the little dealer with his small shop, or perhaps no shop at all. The place of manufacture may be a backroom, a basement, or perhaps the domestic rooms at his humble abode. No matter where the place of manufacture may be, we must insist on the pure product, processed in sanitary surroundings.

In the northern section of this city, there is a popular iced confection offered for a few cents which attracts many pennies of the younger generation.

This is made in a sort of sherbet style, having a pleasant cool and acid reaction to the taste.

On a hot day, in the absence of a particular discernment, it seems enjoyable. To the critical eye and mind, however, there is a different story.

INSPECTION URGED

In the first place it is allowed to remain uncovered to possible contamination from the dust and dirt of the street. It is well, too, to note the condition of the container. Is it bright and clean? And the salesperson in attendance—do his garments and general appearance indicate an appearance of clean methods? Was the product made under conditions that make for purity, and did he work with uncontaminated materials.

To the adult, the answer to these questions will clearly indicate the sensible course of action to take, but what about the children who feel only the attractive appeal?

The remedy must be put in force through a campaign of education of meters of families who will in turn see that the children are properly warned at least.

If the public will at all times insist on certain standards, business must comply.

TELLS OF "SNOWBALLS"

In my former official capacity I came in contact with many forms of food-vending in the streets, and one particular form gave me a most unpleasant impression. That was the sale of "snowballs." This term has no exact relation to the storms of winter. It refers to a form of vending shaved ice.

The desires, in the instances I have particular reference to, set up little sidewalk or frontyard stands. The equipment consisted of a cake of ice in a washtub, assorted flavors and a sheaf of paper.

With an ice shaver, upon order, the ice would be feathered off into the paper, and with a final dash of fruit flavor the result was delivered to the thirsty consumer. Primitive is a mild word to describe the methods of sale.

In one case the ice was most visibly contaminated with obvious dirt. As a result of the action of the authorities there were four defendants in court in short order.

One of the great changes that has come about in street vending in recent years is the disappearance of what some will still remember as the "hokey-pokey."

SAFEGUARDS USED

Most of us can recall hearing the sound of this humble dealer's call as he came down the street in the hottest part of the summer.

His downfall came about through his inability to provide proper sterilizing equipment with his outfit. Today he is being rapidly replaced by the vendors of wrapped ice cream sold from specially constructed boxes.

In my former capacity I have insisted that ice cream in process of sale be untouched by the hands of the vendor, and this insistence had much to do with the later and more satisfactory development.

So, too, with the vendors of soft drinks from wagons. It was impracticable for them to sterilize glasses after each customer, and washing in cold water is of little service.

7 HUB RIOTERS HELD IN $1000

Seven men were held in $1000 each today in Municipal Court, following a North End stabbing and clubbing affray that sent four men to Haymarket Relief Station. The riot started when 100 persons attacked 300 Italian war veterans and Fascisti followers marching to Faneuil Hall to celebrate Italy's entrance into the World War.

The prisoners included Loreto Salvucci, 30, of Washington st., Brighton, a victim of stab wounds; Teoldo Cappelletti, 24, of Sumner st., East Boston; Robert de Agazio, 21, of Dewey st., Watertown; Arthur Del Grasso, 36, of Church Hill, Watertown; Donato Salvucci, 27, of Snow st., Brighton; Gerardo Coccuzzo, 28, of Snow st., Brighton, and John J. Gambera, 37, of Blue Hill ave., Roxbury. All entered not guilty pleas and will appear June 4 for hearing.

WEATHER MAN IS GLOOMY AGAIN

Hopes for good weather, raised Saturday and Sunday with the appearance of Old Sol, were blasted again today in a frowning weather map. Areas of clouds and showers covered the country with the exception of one spot in Idaho.

Forecast for Boston and vicinity: Mostly cloudy tonight and Tuesday; probably some showers; not much change in temperature; gentle shifting winds.

EX-MAYOR BARBOUR OF QUINCY GETS NEW BOAT

The new 50-foot launch, Solitaire, former Mayor Perley Barbour, of Quincy, owner, was launched at the P. D. Lawley, Inc., yard at Town river, Quincy, with appropriate ceremony. The sponsor of the boat was Miss Carolyn Dana of Quincy.

The boat is comfortably furnished with crew quarters for two and guest rooms for four besides the owner's suite. The latest furnishings are used throughout, and the boat is trimmed with mahogany. It will have a cruising speed of about 16 knots.

Five Yachts Picked to Represent U. S.

New York, May 28 (AP)—After a series of test races extending over several weeks five six-meter yachts have been selected to represent the United States in races in Europe this summer.

The selections were announced by the six-meter selection committee after the last of the trials off Oyster Bay.

The five yachts are Harry L. Maxwell's Lanai, Henry B. Plant's Saleema, Clinton H. Crane's Akaba, Jacob Hekma's Heron, and Red Head, owned by C. F. Havemeyer and E. T. Irwin. Saleema was chosen in place of H. F. Whitney's Frieda, which made a good showing in the trials, because Corny Shields, who sailed the boat in the trials, would not be able to go to Europe for the races.

Akaba and Red Head will be sailed by their owners. The skippers for the others are Heron, William Swan, Lanai, Harry Curtis and Saleema, Sherman Hoyt.

Four of the five yachts will be sent to England to compete in the British-American series in July. The fifth will race in Sweden about the same time for the Scandinavian gold cup and later for the Seawanhaka Cup in Norway. One of the four which will compete on the Clyde will be sent to Amsterdam later for the Olympic races.

BIG LEAGUERS TO PLAY IN BENEFIT GAME

Cambridge baseball fans will have a chance to look over some of the youngsters on Bill Corrigan's sensational Red Sox, Tuesday evening at Russell Field, North Cambridge, when a combined team of Red Sox and Philadelphia Athletics' players meet the Cambridge Catholic Club in a benefit game, the proceeds of which will go to Francis "Rabbit" Riley, prominent Cambridge athlete who is confined to a hospital at Lake Saranac.

Joe Cicero, the youthful infielder Henson and Rollins, also infielders, Barbert, outfielder, and a catcher will be sent by Bob Quinn for the game, while Connie Mack, promises to lend a player or pitcher and outfielder. Artie Goo Goo[illegible] of the Pittsfield team, and Irvin Burns, ex-Lewiston, N. E. League, player, will also play with the big leaguers.

The Catholic Club will use its regular line-up with Jim Bulley of Harvard behind the bat, Elmo Wilson, Frank Devins or Peter pitching, Conroy first, Conlon second, Carver third, and St. George, shortstop, Gannon, Kelley and Temple will play the outfield.

"Babe" to Take Crack at Cricket

Philadelphia, May 28 (INS)—Babe Ruth, king of the home run hitters, plans to take a crack at the jolly old game of cricket. The burly outfielder of the New York Yankees declares that he will engage a cricket expert in New York to teach him the fine points of the English game and will tour England in a few years as a cricketer if he masters the sport.

American League pitchers freely express the opinion that if the Babe can successfully transform his home run wallop into a cricket swing he will make the English stars sit up and take notice.

Master Short Game Advises Mrs. Horn

By MIRIAM BURNS HORN
Women's National Golf Champion

The average par on an 18-hole golf course is 72. That allows 36 putts, two on each green. About 15 shots are drives on the long holes.

That leaves 21 shots, three of which are the tee shots on the short holes; another three, the second shots on the par five holes, and the remaining 15, the approaches to the greens.

With all that intricate computation, it simply means that the short game figures exactly 75 per cent of all the strokes in a par round of golf. And yet, how many persons practice three times as long on the short game as on the rest?

Evidently there is more satisfaction in watching a drive sail through the air, for more time is devoted to that department of the game.

One often hears that the drive is the most important shot, but one can be off with one's woods, and still fare rather well, providing the teeshots are not leading into too much trouble.

It is the short shots which win golf matches—those which require such deadly accuracy and nerve. The approach most generally spells disaster to the average player.

Perhaps the greatest reason for this is lack of confidence. For some reason or other, one is inspired at the idea of driving from a tee onto a wide open fairway, but the thought of getting close to a pin occasionally turns to a dub's nightmare.

Often intimidates one.

The game is atrocious, but manages his approach well enough to score fairly well. I have never possessed a brilliant long game, but I have won all my matches with my work around the greens.

I prefer it to the long game, and devote most of my practice (which is little, including all of it) to the pitch and pitch and run shots, most particularly the latter, from just off the green, where, to be down in two shots, usually saves the hole.

Practice on these short shots and note how your scoring will immediately improve.

"good morning, motor"

"Gimme a quart, Bos. Say could you spare me the hot air blower at the garage? I don't feel just right. Shouldn't wonder if the gear shaft or diffy needed some grease. Or maybe the clutch was sprung. Those birds never have much to say for themselves, but they do a lot of work and get awful mean when they don't feel right. Be sure to shoot some grease into the universal. He's a useful little fellow but a bug for grease. Do you know, I wish the old boat could be turned upside down once a month just to reach all of the gadgets underneath. When you have two pieces of steel working together, they are like a couple of strange bull terriers if you don't feed them plenty of oil and grease.

"I hate to complain about my own troubles but you might as well have them change my oil while they are at it. Had last oil was about as lubricating as powdered alum. No body and couldn't stand the heat. The guy who sold it to you ought to have his customers long enough insist on good oil, Boss—it's important."

A NEW PLEASURE IN MOTORING FOR A FEW CENTS MORE A GALLON

WATCH those cars that draw up beside the Socony Special pump—new cars with high compression motors and veterans still going strong despite their carbonized cylinders.

Their owners are paying more a gallon—for what?

Not for transportation exactly. They could save the few cents, get Socony Gasoline, be absolutely protected against fuel troubles, and match mileage and upkeep records with anybody. No, the owners of these cars are looking for "something different, and getting it. They are getting a perceptible improvement in the pick-up of the motor in traffic, a little more silk in the sound of its purr, a little more power on the steep hills, and a gratifying absence of knocking.

They're getting, in brief, a new and exciting pleasure in motoring worth far more than the few extra cents they pay. Like Socony Gasoline and Socony Motor Oil, Socony Special is tested thirteen times before it reaches your car.

Let your motor be the judge

Keenan and Guilford Lead in N. E. P. G. A. Tourney

KEENAN'S HOLE IN 1 GIVES WOODLAND PAIR EDGE

By BILL GRIMES

Against the largest and fastest field that ever competed in an N. E. P. G open tourney, Jesse Guilford of Woodland and John Keenan are leading with a 67 at Woodland. Until Guilford and Keenan showed up with their 67, Charlies McAndrews of Laconia and Burt Hoxie were out in front with a 68.

It was a hole in one by John Keenan that gave to him the lead. Keenan holed out the 16th shot at the 153-yard mark.

Guilford and Keenan were out in 33 and home in 34 while McAndrews and Hoxie, after tieing the 17th in 32, during which time Guilford took 5 to Keenan's 3, finished one stroke behind the pair after they had taken five holes took 38 to come home.

Jack Carey of Stone Ham and Dwight Barnham of Dedham were in third place with 147.

The tournament was on the Lakes Pasen memorial trophy.

Although Guilford and Keenan had a 5 on the 8th they were out in 32 Guilford with a 5 on the first hole and Keenan one of with birdy on the second. Jesse a 4 on his 3rd has never been in trouble going to the 8th Keenan came through with a fine 4

Keenan gave Guilford a run for it on the 17th which Jesse won on a one hole with another 4 on the 6th. And then on the short 7th a new Guilford took down a five while Keenan had got his 3 put him one up 4 at this point.

Then came one par at the 8th where Jesse went in the bank and Keenan took a 5 with a 34. After that the 9th to be run put Keenan out in 37. A birdie on the 11th gave Guilford the edge on the 14th and here Jesse and the 15th put Keenan two under par coming home. Pete Crockett [illegible] 32 on the in and found giving them a 67, one stroke better than Charlie McAndrews and Burt Hoxie who are tied for second place with Jack McAndrews and Eddie Mattes.

Adventure and Romance Amid Scenes of Almost Barbaric Splendor

CHAPTER 38

Graham agreed with me that this was the quickest and safest plan. I told him of a parallel case where one of the guards of the temple had attempted to run away with an Ammazon, who are all virgins, and make his way to Gaboon but had been captured and put to death in a most cruel manner the punishment for this kind of offence consisting in being tied to two stakes driven firmly in a giant anthosp, and being slowly eaten up by the insects.

Of course I said after we had stolen the goddess we shall have been guilty of the same crime and if caught we shall be treated to the same kind of death, the three of us. At this he smiled and said if ever this came to pass I wonder what the Boys we left at St. Edwards would say, when they heard that you and I had been done to death alongside a goddess we had stolen on the west coast of Africa. What a finale.

That we shall have no trouble in carrying her off I am more than certain and if we play the game to its best tune we shall do it as easily as falling off a log. By the by said Graham how did I act my first part in this little act? Splendidly, old Boy I said only you were love smitten I could see by the colour of your cheeks and so for that matter perhaps was she.

You cannot blame me for losing perfect control of myself for a moment he answered and is there a man in the world who would not before such a beautiful Apartition, I was not prepared for such a surprise and for this tuweet voice I shall never forget it if I live a thousand years.

We left Asingo with our tow and were soon through the waterway.

From here we went to my old friend Efaningo where, after visiting the chief in his town, we slept on the sandbank and so did the old chief.

During the first night we spent at Efaningos we had lots of time to discuss the carrying off of the Godess. G. was never tired of the theme.

Trader Did Not See His Way Clear to Marrying

After all you must have seen some lady in England who you really could have liked, I put to him. I possibly met many ladies, as regards beauty second to none, leaving out that Godess whom I only saw once was his honest reply.

I then remarked As regards the Godess I plainly saw she was temporarily smitten when she first saw you and so were you old boy.

By what you have said he then replied I am to understand you are not love smitten as you choose to term it.

If I am I replied I don't see my way clear to getting married yet awhile. As I have told you, my boys are all living and my rank long nature forbids me to fall over head and ears in love at the present time.

If I was to take arms up the river I should merely leave behind me a host of enemies who might forgive me for defending myself against their hostile attacks with intent to murder, but they could never forgive me for stealing their Godess whom they firmly believe and trust with the present and future state of their souls.

Even as things are it would be dangerous ever to visit this portion of the river again, so that if I succeed in carrying off the lady and giving her the freedom nature meant her to enjoy I shall undoubtedly have closed the river for ever against myself.

With this he quite agreed, but if it was a simple matter of funds I could always be certain of his assistance to the end, and this had been his one idea.

I took a nip of brandy and also lit a cigar and kept mum and also pretended to have dropped the conversation.

This continuing for some time I again broke the monotony by saying, Are you game? (This was our old school challenge). He put out his hand without speaking. Lancashire brokers style, I took it saying, It's a deal and for my part I think it a fair and square one. After a little thought he said he was forced to agree with me after all.

He Smiled and Declared It Was a Little Risky

I now called my faithful boy Ikeno over and had a chat with him. He explained matters to [illegible] and how he would be better [illegible] before sundown as I would [illegible] him where I intended to land and how the stealing of the [illegible] was to be done.

He [illegible] largely said said it was a little risky but he would always be with me and was ready at any time I cautioned him to keep silence among the boys who were not to know anything of course, but they must be sober and if he would see to the cleaning of the guns and giving out of the ammunition and get all ready for the journey I would be pleased. I wanted to take advantage of the dark night, especially as the moon would not rise till early midnight, by which time I would have done the deed and we would be far on our way to the sea.

Of course Isogo might follow us but he would never come up with us before we entered the big river, that of course depended on how we got on with the job. If we had to fight I said I can give Isoga a better beating than I did when he charged down on my steamboat and he would be very foolish to follow us. He smiled and began to get all things ship shape. I left it all to him.

I now bade a fond adieu to Efaningo and left him well supplied with liquor and he expressed his gratitude. Peru and I had a drink on the success of our venture and telling Renchoro to give the boys a livener we pulled down the river. I told them the time I expected to reach Ninas place and we were soon gliding down stream. The Ngombi or native harp was kept going to drive dull care away and we were about the happiest gang of thieves, I said to Peru, as imagination could picture, considering our stench.

He laughed and declared what I had said was quite true but he wondered what his one old college chum would think if they could see this play being enacted.

We halted at the inlet of Asingo before sundown, where we dined and rested as we knew we surely have little or no chance of sleep between Ninas and the sea once we had the Godess on board.

When Lonely Hearts Dream

DRAWN BY Dorothy Flack

HAVE you ever watched the wistful expressions on the faces of people in a train or a subway or a trolley car? And have you ever wondered what caused this lonesomeness in faces that should be beaming and happy? I have, and I guess most every one of us have at some time or other wished they could say "Please don't look so unhappy." Especially on a lovely spring day when everything's green and flowery and skies are blue as a baby's eyes and little feathery clouds chase each other across the horizon like a flock of playful lambs.

It's because most of these people have lonely hearts. Perhaps beneath a gorgeous gown or a perfectly tailored suit there's a heart that just aches and cries aloud in its very loneliness. They may have everything material they want, yet there's no comforting arms to hold them, no tiny baby fingers to curl around theirs like a tender rose leaf, no real love to comfort the awful ache.

The most wonderful dream in the world is the dream of one's own home—a home filled with love; a home in which there's no more loneliness nor no more aching heart. And that's why you see so many wistful faces, for that's the dream that they're waiting to have come true, and its realization is the only thing that will bring happiness and joy into a lonely heart shoes, didn't you?"

'Little Sins'; Dolly Reads Thrilling Details of an Elopement

"Not very much."

"I'll take a look at the dresses," said Uling.

He opened the suitcase and took them out one by one, holding each up on two fingers hooked into its neck and appraising it, back and front. "They did you rather well, didn't they? These are all good." He laid one over a chair. "This, I think."

"Shall I put it on now?" asked Dolly.

"There's the dressing room, through that door," he indicated.

The dressing room was small, and clad with chintz.

He removed her hat, gathered her gown up into a boa of silken folds around her shoulders and backed out of it; then, her pink slip, sat down at the dressing table to repair the damage done to her coiffure, she worked hurriedly, with fingers that had begun to shake a little. "I wasn't scared out there," she mused, "except just at first. And now I'm quite calm." She contradicted sternly aloud, frowning at her reflection. "This debate between nerves and will continued until she had finished dressing.

When she was quite ready she stood for an instant with her hot face bent into her palms. Her lips stirred. "Lord," she whispered, "it's a funny thing to pray about—but please, You help me to do this—"

Uling was seated on the sofa, a sheaf of long narrow papers, galley proofs, in his hands. As she came from the dressing room he eyed her up and down, and nodded. "Good," he said. "Have a chair. Miss Quinn I'll explain what we're about."

"Fierce a story," he began, tapping the proofs with the stem of his pipe, "called Paint. It is about a little actress, just a young girl playing in a small part in a show on Broadway. A small part or the equivalent. But she's tremendously ambitious. Determined to get to the top in the show business. Now it's a lad who is crazy to marry her, but she won't listen to him. Wedded to her art—that idea. Do you follow me?"

"Now, the scene I'm going to illustrate is one where he begs her to marry him, and she says no and gives her reasons. The caption for the picture will be a line of hers—" He consulted the proofs. "This, she says, 'I want to be great. I want to be famous. I want to hear people say, "There she goes!"'"

Uling paused and looked at Dolly. "Put yourself in that girl's place. Can you understand at all how she feels?"

"I can, yes."

From the stand beside his drawing table Uling took a sheet of paper smudged with black. "Briefly, here's what's done! I make this rough draft first—see, it's just a scrawl—showing the relative positions of the figures. Then I get in models, one at a time unless the figures are clinched, dancing or kissing or something like that, in which case, of course, I take them together.

"After I have the figures drawn I put in the background, furniture and so on. Now! Look at this rough draft a minute." He bunched over her, pointing with a pencil. "Here's the man, you see. He's standing, leaning against the edge of a table, looking down at the girl. And here she is, sitting on a divan, a few feet away, making her speech."

Uling went back to the sofa and seated himself. "I'll show you my idea," he said. "In the first place, she wouldn't be leaning back. She's too much in earnest, too intent for that. She'd be sitting forward—see, like this—"

His attitude so incongruously feminine that he would have been comical under other circumstances. "Knees crossed," he continued. "Hands so—or no, better this way. Chin up, but not too much. Eyes radiant, full of her dream. 'I want to be great, I want to be famous—' See what I mean?"

"I think so, Mr. Uling."

"Suppose you sit here and try it," Dolly tried it.

"That's pretty good," said Uling, planted in front of her. "Let the shoulders drop an inch or so, Hela. Don't think about Dolly Quinn, child. Think about the girl in the story. You're that girl, and nobody's watching you but the boy who loves you—you want really to feel this—"

His wheedling voice talked on, while Dolly strove to locate the thousand small tasks he'd given him which her muslin seemed tied.

"Can I stand up?" she asked timidly, "and sit down all over again? I think that might help."

"Certainly. Walk around. Take a few deep breaths." He was smiling reassuringly. "Don't look so worried, Miss Quinn. You'll have it in no time."

"I hope so."

"I know so. Just as soon as you stop trying too hard. You know when you showed me how the girl was posed in that old drawing? You were lovely. Perfectly natural. But now you're saying to yourself, 'Oh dear, maybe I won't suit him'—"

Dolly giggled guiltily, and at once felt better.

She went back to the sofa.

"Better!" said Uling, promptly and emphatically. "Much better! Smooth your dress—no many folds in the front. Chin a little higher—no, no, not too—there. Hands are fine."

He paced about before her. Try dozen times, that Uling queried, "D'you like it at the store?"

"Very specially."

"Then," he said, "I wouldn't bother going back there, if I were you."

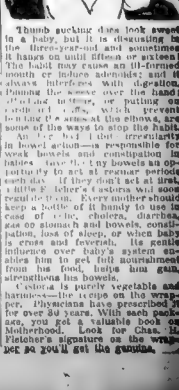
Cute in a Baby—Awful at Three —and it's Dangerous

by Ruth Brittain



Thumb sucking does look sweet to a baby, but it is disgusting in the three-year-old and sometimes it hangs on until fifteen or sixteen! The habit may cause an ill-formed mouth or induce adenoids; and it always interferes with digestion. Thinking the sweet over in this kind of thing to stop, or putting on medicine [illegible] prevent [illegible] Dr. Graham Chambers, one of the best authorities on child health, suggests some of the ways to stop the habit.

And he is right! Most surprisingly in bowel action—as responsible for weak bowels and constipation in babies as for a fat baby's bowels an opportunity to act at regular periods such as if they don't act at first, a little [illegible] castoria will assist regularity. Every mother should keep a bottle of it handy to use in cases of colic, cholera, diarrhea, sour stomach and bowels, constipation, loss of sleep, or when baby is cross and feverish. Its gentle influence over baby's system establishes him in get full nourishment from his food, helps him gain, strengthens his bowels.

Castoria is purely vegetable and harmless—the recipe on the wrapper. Physicians have prescribed it for over 30 years. With each package, you get a valuable book on Motherhood. Look for Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper so you'll get the genuine.

Doctor Reed Discusses the Prevention of Obesity

By CHAS. A. L. REED, M. D.
Former President of the American Medical Association

YOU will recall that yesterday I mentioned the relation of two classes of food to the fat-making process in your body. One class was the proteins (fish, meat, eggs, cheese, etc); the other was the carbohydrates (starches, sugars, etc)

The main sources of the fat deposit is the body is, however, the fat taken into the stomach with and as food. The mechanism which transports fat from the stomach to the tissues is a very simple one. As such fats not used up for the energy requirements of the body are deposited without chance—that is, they go in as fat and are deposited as fat.

To prevent obesity of this kind therefore, the first thing is to reduce food to the amount necessary for the working of the body. Persons who can eat protein foods should go on doing so, but carbohydrates, including the fats, are cut down to allow the surplus fat already deposited to be burned up in maintaining the fires of life.

Patients who are fat enough will benefit from physical exercise. The real value of physical exercise depends on its tonic effects on the heart and muscles. If it is carefully taken it will rid the muscles of the excess of fat which has lowered their tone. In very heavy individuals, especially, the exercise must be very gradual and not carried to the point of fatigue.

Obesity due to internal causes—that is to say, disturbances of the governing glands of the system, is, of course, a totally different matter. It may be completed by a deficiency in one gland, the thyroid, for instance, but more often there is a disturbance which involves the whole chain; thyroid, pituitary and sexual glands. Still, diet is of no less importance. So according to the laws of conservation of energy, a surplus of fatty deposit can only come from the food that is eaten.

If the patient takes no food he would lose weight as long as he expended energy. Unfortunately, however, the fat is deposited at the expense of the vital functions of the body. The treatment, therefore, can only be prescribed by a physician who will take into consideration, in the patient's capacity for [illegible] privation, etc. Whatever he orders may be reinforced by observance of all the laws of health—proper exercise, fresh air, sunlight and mental hygiene.

It is a mistake to suppose that hard exercises by itself is the proper remedy for overweight. The Press authority distrusts it entirely and says that the only way to treat obesity is by rest in bed with suitable dietary. Although probably no one method of treatment will suit all cases, yet undoubtedly some cases need rest more than they do exercise, and the fact should not be forgotten.

In conclusion it must be remembered that since biblical times, when Aaron went into the cattle business, there have been the "lean kind" and those who have been "fat and well favored." In other words the fatness is often due to an original type of constitution. In all such cases the foregoing hints are to be followed but always with discretion and under the guidance of a physician.

A Three-Minute Journey Into Egypt

By TEMPLE MANNING

THERE is at least one way in which the Egyptian woman, unemancipated as she is, has an advantage that the American woman, emancipated though she may be, has not. She may not be permitted to be unveiled in public, she must ride in shuttered palanquins, she must [illegible] consent to polygamous marriages. But she has one right in her own, and that is her property right. Under Mohammedan laws, a woman may do exactly as she wishes with her own property. Furthermore and here is her advantage over her American sister, she may defend her rights herself in court, should she so desire.

For centuries these women have had this right, and they know how to protect themselves. This dignity is the basis for their whole life.

It is no uncommon sight, in Egypt, to see a case in court tried by a woman. Of course, unless one is admitted to the bar, this could not occur in America. Indeed, a man may often choose his sister to represent him in a matter that involves property rights.

And it would surprise you to see how these women, accustomed as they are to the background, blossom out, as it were, on achieving, for the moment, the limelight. They speak easily and fluently, they use their hands freely. They are convincing orators. And they generally come out victorious from these legal encounters.

Trick 6. Declarer does not lead the Club Ace at this point for his discard as there is danger of an adverse cuff; nor can he risk a trump lead because the Clubs may not establish in three leads, in which case the Queen of Spades would be needed as a card of entry. To assure himself of at least two discards later he leads a small club, trumping with the Spade Jack.

Trick 7. Declarer now draws the last trump and enters Dummy to make his established Clubs.

MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By HELEN ROWLAND

NO man really wishes to die a bachelor—he only wants to go on LIVING that way for 60 or 80 years.

It is not so often the troubles and storms they face together, as the ennui and the dead calm of domesticity, that drive a husband or wife to leap overboard from the Good Ship Matrimony.

* * *

What the author of Companionate Marriage seems to be trying to do, is to take the lock out of wedlock and the bands off husbands.

* * *

A woman may flee from temptation—but a man just crawls away from it in the cheerful hope that it may overtake him.

* * *

All those diverting little love-spats that brighten up the courtship and lend such a tang to the engagement are merely the preliminary training for the Big Fight.

The average man's idea of future punishment for sinners would probably be an eternal spring housecleaning with 24 moving days a year.

It takes hard work to make a rest seem like a thrill, hard times to make a dollar look like a fortune, and a few years of misery with the wrong woman, to make the right woman look like an angel.

* * *

A man's conscience seldom begins to work until his stomach or his arteries go on strike, and his doctor begins ordering him to give up the things that his clergyman has been warning him against all along.

A woman's "MUST" turns a date from a privilege into a duty, and a kiss from a pleasure into a daily chore.

FAMOUS LAST WORDS

CHILD AND HIS TASKS

By L. LAMAR MATTHEWS

AT 5 o'clock Charles came from the playground, where he had played football since 2 o'clock. He had lost in the scrimmage, and felt disappointed about that. He had hurt his knee and bruised his shoulder. Besides that he was tired and ravenously hungry. And the minute he set his foot in the house his mother said:

"Charlie, I want you to fix that top on the coal bin as I told you to do yesterday. And I want you to put away all that rubbish you left on the cellar floor, and your father says tell you that he is tired of driving a muddy car and he wants it washed before he uses it again."

Charles said something ungracious aloud and something else under his breath. Then he stalked on upstairs to his room with a scowl on his face which his mother could not understand.

If she had just waited until the boy had eaten and rested, she could have then assigned the tasks and he would not have minded the work.

That same mother makes her young daughter get up at 7 o'clock in the morning and practice her piano lesson before breakfast. Now, who on earth wants to play a piano before breakfast?

The woman seems to think that her children are some sort of vitalized machines and all she has to do is to get hold of them and turn them in the direction she wants them to go. And she has never heard of "the psychological moment."

Everybody has some time during the day that is his best time for getting results. The condition of the mind is not the same all day. At one hour a child may be low in vitality and energy, while at a later or earlier period he is primed for achievement. The wise parent will find out the best time for a certain task or instruction and make the schedule accordingly.

A demand upon the child's effort at the wrong time, in the wrong mood and at the wrong place is worse than useless. Mothers who keep an eye upon their children can usually tell from the youngster's attitude, expression, tone of voice whether the time is ripe for new endeavors.

When your boy is deep in the spell of a mystery story is no time to suggest exercise with a punching bag. If his playmates are waiting outside for him to come and fly his kite, you need not expect him to thrill over planting flowers in the back yard. There are times when he might enjoy making his own little garden, but that isn't one of them.

Stop for a moment and consider your own temperament and peculiarities. When do you like to do certain kinds of work?

Under what circumstances can you get the best results?

After all, it is results that you want from your child's training and not blind obedience.

Find out when your child is fittest and let him do the hardest jobs at that time. Use as much tact and diplomacy in guiding his efforts as you do in your dealings with other people. The results may surprise you.

REFORM AND MARRIAGE

By LUCY LOWELL

OCCASIONALLY in the time I devote to speculating upon certain complexities in this incomprehensible life we live, it occurs to me to contemplate the most obscure and unsolvable puzzle of all—namely, why reasonably intelligent women marry thoroughly undesirable men with the idea, presumably, of reforming them.

I never have arrived at even the beginning of the answer to this riddle. I suppose I never shall and that neither will anyone else.

One such woman will tell you that her particular bounder has turned a new leaf; that he has been doing differently and better throughout many months and that he knows—provided only she will stand by him—he can change the whole course of his experience and nature and make something of himself.

Very well, then; let him make something of himself before marriage and let him establish that new something firmly in time—years not months—and then bring her the result of his good resolution. If he were the right sort of man he would hesitate to ask the woman he loves to link her fortunes with a mere promise.

He may be sincere in his good intent, but human nature is what it is, capable of striving for a goal but quite likely to quit trying when the goal—marriage in his case—has been attained.

And the chances are that a man looking to a woman to reform him is woefully short on the one thing needful—on character.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

ALWAYS the treasures most dear to our longing
Come, if at all, to us weighted
with trust,
Theirs is the way of the honey-bees
thronging,
Each with its fragment of musky-
sweet dust.

Nothing is perfect but patience has wrought it,
Fashioned it slowly for granite
or gauzel,
Out of thought's limitless regions
has sought it,
Patterned and fashioned it after vast laws.

Many the light-hearted phases of pleasure,
Soon to be red with oblivion's
rust;
Still, every rare and most-coveted treasure
Comes, if at all, to us weighted
with trust.

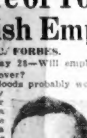
Beware of Young Workers! Selfish Employers Warned

By B. C. FORBES.

New York, May 28—Will employ think this over?

The young bloods probably won't until these days of changing our [illegible] said a [illegible] manager of a large number of a city that has been fairly dictatorial and has caused employers to move plants where it is easier to get in the saddle to open-shop forces.

We tellows who have worked for their employers know how well off we now are.



B. C. Forbes

We cannot help comparing our wages, hours and working conditions now with what they used to be. The change has always have been. And I give the union most of the credit for the betterment of our lot.

"But we old-timers, almost to a man, feel that the employers have been darned decent to us and that we have met our demands. It looks to us as if there's no satisfying a lot of the young shavers who are coming into the trade in the last few years. They don't think out enough appreciation for the bosses. They don't give a bang—and they say so—whether he can afford to make more and more after giving in to demand after demand. They have never gone through hard times. They are headstrong, cocky. They're always agitating, never satisfied.

"They're going to go too far by and by. And then you'll see a sound, burst-up, shadowed trade between the bosses and the union. And my guess is that the union will lose out, because these young trouble-makers in most of them either foreign-born or of foreign extraction, are mainly upon labor that aren't like, dead in the cards."

During recent months, ever since unemployment became a disturbing factor, the number of letters from workers pouring into this column has been beyond anything ever before experienced. I try to read them all. Moreover, I submitted them to an associate to study carefully and see if any definite conclusion could be drawn from them. Here is perhaps the most significant comment handed me:

A great many of the letters come from men and women who have been laid off mainly because of their age, from as low as thirty-five in the case of some women and the early forties for men.

But there is a very striking difference in the tone of the letters written by middle-aged and older workers still employed and those the letters written by young employees.

Almost without exception, the older workers express satisfaction with their working conditions. A lot of them write in defending criticisms that have been made of their companies. They take pains to tell about the different things now done for their employees to make their work and their home conditions and their happiness greater than in the past.

Hardly one of the young workers writes a good word for either their own company or about other employes or about treatment of the employes. They seem to have the impression from these letters that there is nothing dissatisfaction and disorganized agitation among the young element."

What does the foregoing suggest? It conveys very clearly, to my mind at least, that the growing lack of thought out regard for what have reached or passed middle age is short-sighted, dangerous and likely to lead to most undesirable complications. Without the sobering and steadying influence of older employes who have learned loyalty and who are keenly appreciative of the marketable improvements in working conditions the younger heads, never having tasted real depression, are liable to be shaken to the foundations if their demands cannot possible be met. They are out for Number One—without being conscious of it—because they know from the stern actualities of life that unreasoning selfishness usually makes disaster inevitable.

* * * *

Employers will do well to think this matter carefully. Perhaps some of those who cannot be moved by consideration of humanity, considerateness and brotherliness, may be moved by motives of self-interest, by fear of the ultimate consequences if they persist in their ruthless practice of throwing older workers into the street.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE ☆ ☆ BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN ☆ ☆ BOSTON, MAY 28, 1928

Would You Pay One Dollar for Peace of Mind?

MORE than 10,000 readers of The Boston Evening American have taken advantage of the opportunity presented by this newspaper to provide themselves with accident insurance for one year at the nominal cost of One Dollar.

We congratulate these men and women upon the promptness with which they have seized upon a wonderful bargain in Protection.

Their example may well be followed with profit by other thousands.

They have paid one dollar and they have carried away security and peace of mind.

These policies, to run for one year, are issued to persons from 15 to 70 years of age. If while traveling as a fare-paying passenger upon railroad or car, elevated or underground railway, car, passenger steamboat or steamship, the insured loses his life, both hands, both feet, or the sight of both eyes, or suffers any of the other injuries described in the policy, the company will pay $10,000.

TEN thousand dollars for ONE.

For injuries sustained in the wrecking of taxicab, public omnibus or passenger elevator—as set forth in the policy—the sum of $2500.

For injuries which shall wholly disable and prevent the insured from performing each and every duty, an INDEMNITY OF $20 A WEEK FOR NOT MORE THAN 15 CONSECUTIVE WEEKS.

This protection is almost given away. There is no "string" to the offer, no "lie-up," no demand that you first subscribe and then get the policy as a "premium." The policies are on the counter in the office of the Boston Evening American on the street floor. If you are within the age limits —15 to 70—you give your name and that of the person to whom the money should be paid in the event of loss of life.

AS these lines are being typed the procession still is pouring in and out of that office on the street floor, as has been the case all day and on every previous day since the insurance "bargain" was first brought to New England's attention.

Obviously there is no money in it for the Boston Evening American, but on the contrary some expense, in the way of clerical hire, etc.

But there IS a great deal of satisfaction in it, for in carrying on in this way Mr. Hearst's representatives in Boston feel that they perform a public service and so are living up to the ideals of the Hearst organization.

HOW would you get along if today you happened to receive serious injury at the hands of some hit-and-run motorist?

How would those get along who are dependent upon you—wife, children, mother, father or younger brothers and sisters?

"NOT everybody meets with an accident?"

True enough. YOU may never suffer loss through accidental injury, just as you may never experience loss of property through fire. Would you consider giving up your fire insurance?

We know that accidents WILL happen and that they will happen frequently. What we do not know is WHO is going to suffer by them.

Why gamble?

Why take the risk when, through the Boston Evening American, you can pass it along to the North American Accident Insurance Company for One Dollar?

If you are unable to come to this office for your policy, cut and clip the coupon you will find upon another page and mail it today. Send the dollar with it. Be sure to give your age and be careful to write plainly your own name and that of the person to whom indemnity for loss of life should be paid.

The Unkindest Cut

Anti-Saloon League Distrustful of a MOST OBEDIENT Legislature

The superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League having complained to him that members of the Legislature have taken part in "drunken parties" held in the State House, Governor Fuller recommends that the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House name an investigating committee.

Whereupon the Anti-Saloon League man permits it to be known that this is not at all satisfactory.

What Mr. Forgrave wants—"demands" would be the better word, perhaps—is an "authentic" investigation, by a commission of "outstanding and fair-minded citizens."

He denies to reporters that he has ever made allegations against members of the Legislature, but apparently he would take the proposed inquiry out of the Legislature's hands.

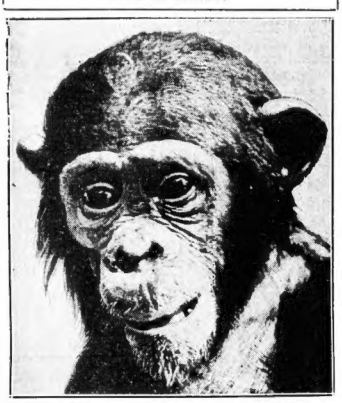
If this is not lack of trust and confidence by the Anti-Saloon League in a Legislature which has never failed to do what the League wanted we misunderstand the implication.

Mr. Forgrave and the League should be given all the rope they need.

Let THEM name the committee, to be composed of three or four "shoot-first-and-investigate-afterwards" enforcement agents, Mr. Forgrave—as chairman—and nine other frank, honest, unbiased and absolutely impartial citizens.

What Do You Make of Him?

Is He Our Relation?



HERE HE IS—LOOK AT HIM

This is one of four young chimpanzees recently seen in London's Zoological Garden. Look at him, study him without prejudice. Does his HUMAN look surprise you? Does it indicate, as Darwinians suggest, a more or less close relationship with the human race? Or is it just an accident?

Was this "funny face," included among the creatures in the Garden of Eden, made to amuse little Cain and Abel as they grew up? Or is this face, with its strange suggestion of human features, a product of what science calls "evolution"?

Darwin, you know, NEVER SAID THAT MEN DESCEND FROM MONKEYS. He said all animals came from animals of an inferior form, through evolution, a process of change, lasting through millions of years.

He did not believe that monkeys were our ancestors and never said so. But he thought that monkeys, including this chimpanzee, were closely related to some other animal form from which men did descend.

You may see among certain savage tribes of human beings faces NOT much more human than this one.

Science will tell you that the number of bones in this animal's body is the same as in our own, and the bones answer the same purposes. The blood of this strange creature is like our blood.

"Ah!" you will say, "but I have a soul and this chimpanzee has none. Don't talk to me about him." Quite right, each is entitled to his own opinion.

Perhaps, for that matter, we should be flattered if we knew what this chimpanzee thinks as he looks at us and wonders that we make so little use of our opportunities.

THE AGE OF FAITH IN BUSINESS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THIS, and not the Middle Ages, is the age of great faith.

Will C. Wood, a bank examiner, said the other day in an address that men had never had such faith in one another as they have today. This was the expression of a business man and not of a preacher, and it illustrates the fact that the faith business is passing out of the hands of the preachers and is going into everybody's hands.

We often hear the dark ages referred to as the ages of great faith. The time of Dante, of Christopher Columbus and of St. Louis was supposed to be the time when men believed and were more trusting than they are today.

They believed all right, but they believed a lot of junk that wasn't true. They believed a lot of totems and taboos which science has since dissipated. They believed in a literal hell of fire and a literal heaven, where people were occupied in making up in indulgence what they had missed in this life.

Faith in all these things has disappeared, largely, but there never was a time in the history of the world when men had more faith that counts and that brings results than today.

For they have faith in one another as they never had before and the important thing is for us to trust one another more than to trust Providence or trust luck or trust some superstition.

The Hottentots of Africa believe in the witch doctors, but it doesn't do them any good. Savages believe in dances and all sorts of hocus-pocus to appease the gods, just as in ancient times they believed in slaughtering bullocks and rams that the Deity might be appeased by the smell of blood.

Nowadays the whole enormous fabric of credit is built upon faith. The motto of Shakespeare, "Neither a borrower nor a lender be," if heeded nowadays would put every bank out of business.

The commercial transactions of the world are largely managed by borrowed money and the enormous department stores, most of them, prosper because most people keep their word.

Peace, so ardently desired by all nations, is not going to come until we have faith in each other. In spite of ancient superstitions and jealousies that exist we are coming to believe in one another more than ever before.

There is more religion of the residual and practical kind now in the world than there ever was before.

A little reflection will show that this isn't such a bad world after all and it is getting better.

New York Day by Day

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 28—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up and sat all morning at a typewriter achieving six scant lines which I flung away, and off for a walk with my dog. In the park was a tattered fellow fallen in a fit, and a lady in a limousine stopped and took him to a hospital.

And along a path hair stiffened on the dog's back and he growled menacingly albeit nobody was about, and I discovered it was the animal smell from the zoo inner by. Honest to my labours again, but accomplished nothing. And depressed with the notion I may be cuckoo, my wife, poor wretch, being sure of it.

In the evening to a dinner, and talked to John Golden, whom I had never met. And also there were Charles Hanson Towne, David E. Town, E. H. Parker and others, and later with my wife and John and Margaret Kennedy to see "Porgy," a brave play and as realistic as any I ever saw. So to bed.

AS result of an automobile accident an actor found himself in need of blood transfusion at a hospital. A Times Square roundsman wired him: "As result of Broadway gin, my blood is mostly formaldehyde, but if you think it will do any good I can spare you a quart."

THOSE who now and then rent a Western Union messenger call for masquerades or amateur boxing bouts must gravely promise "not to dishonor it."

ONE of those garrumphing Majors with a walrus mustache, bushy eyebrows and a white vest climbed out of his club on Fifth Avenue.

"Get a taxi!" he said.

"Will this pink one do?" inquired the starter, pointing to one at the curb.

"Helyes," he snorted. "I don't care if the driver uses perfume."

IT would seem ping-pong has now gone the way of croquinole and other games of its period. There is a steady sale of ping-pong outfits, and mostly in aristocratic areas. There are still ping-pong tournaments and the most devoted followers are men. Ping-pong killed the game of tiddle-de-winks as dead as a door nail, and that's something.

THROUGH oval windows on a Broadway corner crowds watch intricate machines rolling out cigarettes—many thousands hourly. Mingling in the crowds constantly are two plainclothes men who watch for pickpockets. Wherever crowds are attracted in passing, the pursefliters find a haven.

THE lobbies of those dim-lit hotels in the Forties that change names with such frequency offer a colorful slice of Tenderloin life. The clerks are hard-boiled, furtive gentlemen who can only express themselves intelligently in underworld argot. In passable English, they seem inarticulate.

Elevators are manned by workworn and sullen colored boys who will only brighten up at a tip. Among lobby loungers every stranger is eyed with faint suspicion. Most of the patrons are racketeers living in fear of "the rap."

Late at night, the shady hotel patrons fraternize. Men in shirt sleeves and kimonoed women with shabby white dogs group about the entrance. Frowzy heads hang from upstairs windows and there is the grinding wheeze of a phonograph.

An hour after midnight the bellhops are racing to the lunch counters and returning with sandwiches. The dips, dice sharpers and other creatures of the night who prey on humanity gather shortly before dawn to count the spoils. But from daylight until 4 o'clock in the afternoon all life an motion in the shady hotels seem to suspend.

THERE is a certain dapper jewelry salesman who becomes ubiquitous when Douglas Fairbanks comes to town. Wherever Fairbanks goes he finds him. Once he returned to his hotel apartment and there sat the salesman. "How on you suppose he got in here?" a friend asked the actor. "I don't know," he replied. "He must come out of the woodwork."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I AM about to report a conversation I had recently with a girl of 20. I do not indorse these remarks, nor do I condemn them. I merely hand them on. They merit your attention for they are typical. Scores of young people who "can't get along with mother" come to my office every week. This conversation takes their attitude.

Gladys crosses slim legs, exposing much silken skin and pink knee, powders her nose, maps in a fresh mouth and remarks—

"Mother 'n' I had another row last night. Gosh, it's awful the way we scrap. And over nothing at all. The least little thing gets her goat.

"Last night it was because I didn't tell her what went on at Rita's party. She thinks I ought to come rushing home and tell her every thing. Then, if I don't, she's sure there's something I'm ashamed to tell. I told her that I just never thought of telling her—and then she got madder 'n' ever. She cried and I said I didn't see out of my life, and the more I tried to explain the worse she felt.

"Gee, I can't make her see the way I feel. She's always saying I don't love her. I love her all right, and I respect her just like any girl respects her mother. But I can't talk things over with her. She doesn't know what it's all about.

"Mother looks at things different from the way we do now. She's always worrying about what people say or wondering if a thing is 'safe' or 'nice.' She never goes ahead and does anything different without getting all smoked up about it first. She thinks it's terrible because I don't make a lot of fuss too. But say—suppose a working girl stopped to fuss over everything the way mother fusses, how far'd she get? You've got to make it snappy nowdays. But she can't understand that and that's one reason why I've got through trying to tell her anything.

"Mother says she always told her mother everything when she was a girl, but I say things were different then. Working makes a girl different. You've got to make up your own mind when you're working. You can't run home and ask your mother. Mother can't help and she can't understand that. And she can't understand the different feeling you have when you have your own money.

"She says that a girl's mother is always the proper person to advise her. But how can you advise about something you don't know? Mother thinks that just because she's lived longer than I that she knows more. But that isn't so. It doesn't matter how long you've lived—if you haven't done things you can't advise about them.

"If my mother would just stop trying to be like a mother—we'd get along fine. But she thinks she ought to act to me the way her mother acted to her and it doesn't work. Times have changed.

"That's the whole truth—times have changed, but she won't see it. She keeps thinking that things are the same but it's us kids that are different. And I can't make her see it at all.

"Gosh, it's sure hard to get along with mother."
